'No formal planning approach, no budgetary control system'

WCB management scorched in report

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

A devastating indictment of middle and top management at the Workers' Compensation Board was made public Thursday.

In preparation since January, the report prepared by P. S. Ross and Partners, a management consultant firm, states the WCB between 1971 and the present had "no formal planning approach, no budgetary control system, an inadequate management information system and a lack of organizational clarity."

And the people running the $141 million operation were, at the middle-management level, "seriously weakened, and top management reportedly has operated in an authoritarian, elitist and secretive manner."

Rehabilitation praised

Only the rehabilitation branch of the operation comes out of the investigation with words of praise. The report states that morale was high in that section, the operation reasonably well run and the results of their work satisfactory.

While all aspects of the WCB operation come under critical fire, some of the harshest words are reserved for the board's data-processing department operating with all the latest electronic aids and IBM computers.

The Ross report says bluntly: "The over-all picture is one of much hardware working long hours to produce only the most rudimentary information."

While noting that the data-processing department had attempted to apply "appropriate tools-of-the-trade" in its operation, the report says it hadn't been successful in utilizing those tools.

Staff, costs soaring

In addition to the hardware, "the department on two occasions within the past year has retained the services of IBM to monitor the functioning of its computer system with the idea of improving terminal response time . . . in spite of these efforts, the impression remains that the productivity of the system and of the department as a whole, is distinctly low. This was particularly noticeable on the hardware side where, during one 10-minute period in the computer room . . . sufficient productivity could not be mustered from the remaining sources to print more than two lines on the high-speed printer."

Using 1971 as a base year, the report reveals that the

Highlights

- The Workers' Compensation Board should enter its next fiscal year with a well-planned budget incorporating a hard comprehensive analysis of proposed new or expanded programs;
- A management system should be develped to provide accurate, meaningful, timely information on indicators of performance other than budgets;
- Decrease full authority of the board chairman by establishing a board of directors to whom the chairman would be accountable, with a requirement to submit annual plans, budgets and quarterly statements of operating expense to the labor minister;
- Maintenance of the present basic role of the board comprising claims adjudication and payment, medical and vocational rehabilitation, accident prevention, industrial hygiene and first aid training;
- A formalized system of long-range planning;
- A well-organized comprehensive cost reduction program covering all areas of the board's operations.

132,000 in danger of hearing damage

Of a workforce of 850,000 people in potentially-noisy environments in B.C., 132,000 are considered in danger of suffering hearing damage.

And the P.S. Ross report on the Workers' Compensation Board states that of that total between 13,000 and 20,000 will probably finish up with claims for compensation.

Labor Minister Allan Williams agreed that hearing damage was of prime concern to his department and to the WCB "as are all job safety measures."

But he could offer no immediate relief to the situation other than to promise to keep studying ways to eliminate the hazard.

The Ross report recommends an early warning system for workers in noisy environments and suggests that preventive policy measures be stepped up.

Bill lops 50,000 from UIC rolls

Cullen
. . . saving to create jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bud Cullen introduced a bill Thursday that would cut about 50,000 claimants off the unemployment insurance rolls.

The amendment which would require claimants to work 12 weeks out of 52 before they qualify for benefits was immediately criticized by Andy Hogan (NDP—Cape Breton-East Richmond), who said it would have a devastating impact in areas of high unemployment.

"It's very damned hard for people in some areas to find work even for eight weeks out of the year — as incredible as that sounds to a person in Toronto," Hogan said in an interview after the bill was introduced in the Commons.

The bill likely will get a rough ride in the House because the proposal to extend the qualifying period to 12 weeks from the current eight weeks also has been criticized as too harsh by some Liberal backbenchers. On the other hand, some Conservative MPs say that even 12 weeks is too generous and the qualifying period should be even longer.

Cullen said savings resulting from tougher unemployment insurance regulations would be directed into job-creation projects in economically-depressed areas.

He said most of the 50,000 who would be affected by the extended qualifying period are not steady members of the permanent work force. They tend to be persons under 25 or housewives who work for small stretches to supplement their family income.

The bill would implement a number of measures outlined by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in his May budget speech.

It would merge the Unemployment Insurance Commission with the department of manpower and immigration. The new department would be called the department of employment and immigration and Cullen said the merger would enable the government to provide "one-stop-service" for the unemployed.

In addition to toughening the qualifying period for the unemployment insurance benefits, the bill would tie special extended benefits to regional unemployment rates rather than the national rate. That would result in longer benefit periods in areas of high unemployment, such as the Atlantic provinces and parts of Quebec, and a shorter benefit period in areas of relatively low unemployment, such as the Prairies.

The government also plans to link more closely the number of weeks during

Marchand named to Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Jean Marchand was installed as a senator Thursday, 45 days after declining a Senate seat to run unsuccessfully in the Nov. 15 Quebec election.

"I'm still alive enough to fight," he said as he left Parliament in October. Thursday, he returned and took a seat in the Upper Chamber, only a few hours after his friend and former cabinet colleague Prime Minister Trudeau announced his appointment.

Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Steuart, who will be replaced at a provincial leadership convention this weekend, was also named to the Senate.

The appointments fill two of 19 vacancies in the 104-seat Senate, and are likely to add a touch of spice to that chamber.

Both men are short and scrappy, and despite their vast differences in background, share gifts of wit and capacities for blunt, combative speech.

For Marchand, 57, the appointment comes at the end of a mercurial public career that spans 11 years in federal politics and three major cabinet portfolios.

Espionage hinted

Canada expels Soviet attache

OTTAWA (CP) — A member of the Soviet embassy has been asked to leave Canada because of activities incompatible with his diplomatic status.

The external affairs department said Thursday Maj. Vladimir Vassiliev, assistant air attache, has been declared persona non grata.

He is expected to be on his way home to the Soviet Union by the weekend.

External affairs officials said by long custom they do not release reasons for asking diplomats to leave.

About a year ago military officers' messes were warned about East European military attaches dropping in for drinks and picking up intelligence.

The last Communist to be expelled from Canada was a Chinese diplomat about two years ago.

Reports from the United States said he was taking money across the border to pass to people who eventually sent it to assist Philippines revolutionaries.

Pipeline secrecy attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Details of the proposed oil tanker port at Kitimat should be open for public discussion, a spokesman for the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Thursday.

Gary Gallon criticized the federal transport ministry for withholding details and said the ministry seems "intent on making a decision without any public input.'

He said the ministry is entitled to withhold details, but thought it would discuss the matter in light of public concern that navigation in the area poses a serious threat of oil spills.

"It's a very bad political mistake on their part, but it's typical of the transport ministry not to involve the public, as we've seen with their proposals to extend Vancouver International Airport," Gallon said.

Kitimat Pipe Line Co. Ltd. applied Wednesday to the National Energy Board for permission to build a dock at Kitimat and a 753-mile pipeline to Edmonton.

The application was made public, but the transport ministry refused permission for the company to disclose its proposals for operation of the proposed port.

$6.6-million bungling not so awful—Andras

OTTAWA (CP) — The government bungled $6.6 million of the taxpayer's money away in the last year, Treasury Board President Robert Andras told the Commons Thursday, indicating he considered it a drop in the bucket.

Andras said his officials have calculated the maximum loss to the taxpayer from sloppy administration cited by the auditor-general at $6.6 million. He doubted whether it would ever be recovered.

Andras stressed that it was a small amount considering that the financial transactions — the cash flow — of all government departments, agencies, and corporations involved a total of $129 billion in 1975-1976. The actual spending was $33 billion.

"Let's keep it in perspective," Andras told Opposition MPs, criticizing them and the press for exaggerating the auditor-general's report which said the government has virtually lost control over spending.

The $6.6 million loss was only .00005 per cent or one-twenty thousandth of the total amount involved in government transactions, he said.

Andras was replying to a motion of non-confidence introduced by Conservative Leader Joe Clark who said the government has no control over spending and Parliament has no power to do anything about it. The motion was defeated.

"It is my contention that the government is in control of the public purse," Andras said, reminding the Commons that the government is still collecting taxes, paying interest on bonds and mailing out social security cheques every month.

Admitting there were several inadequacies in government administration that have caused losses, he added that Parliament does have the controlling power and will use its power to clean up the government's act.

Otherwise he couldn't understand "what in the devil we are doing here every day."

New prison study a waste – Barrett

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Dave Barrett, former premier of B.C. said Thursday studies on prison reform have been carried out since 1936 and the parliamentary committee now re-examining the question is wasting time.

Speaking to a political science class at Acadia University, Barrett said the material compiled over the years contains recommendations for the kind of preventive work needed for protection of victims of crime and the security of prison staff.

However, these recommendations have not been carried out, he said.

"All we are now getting is another parliamentary committee to cover the same route . . ."

COLONIST 500 FUND

It's amazing when you think about it.

And doubly gratifying when you realize that the $130.72 for the Colonist 500 Fund from these kindergarten pupils was money they had raised themselves and didn't just bring from home.

Stan Turner, principal of Frank Hobbs elementary school, wrote that "the enclosed cheque for $130.72 was raised by the combined efforts of Mrs. Hoyte, our kindergarten teacher, and the children and parents of her two classes.

"They collected old toys and books and made candy; then they held a sale to which the other children in the school were invited. The kindergarten pupils acted as store clerks and enjoyed not only the raising of the money for a good cause, but a very worthwhile learning experience."

As the young pupils well know, all their money will go to help less-fortunate families enjoy a better Christmas.

Last year, more than $44,000 was collected for the 500 Fund at the Colonist office, other businesses, and at Eaton's People Tree, standing once again in the Broad Street mall to accept donations.

Donations may be brought into the Colonist office at 2621 Douglas Street, or may be mailed to this address (postal code V8W 2N4).

In addition, Avis Rent-a-Car offices at 638 Humboldt Street, and at the corner of Quadra and Pandora Streets will accept donations.

WCB went into an upward spiral in staff and costs in 1972 and was dangerously close to being out of control by 1975.

At the end of 1972 there were 855 people on staff at the WCB. A year later total level stood at 908, an increase of 53 workers. By the end of 1974 staff had increased to 1,150, an increase for the year of 242, and by the end of last year staff had peaked to 1,347, an increase of another 197 people.

"The Ross report says that the upward movement of staff "suggests a strategy of increased staffing, presumably based on the assumption that this would result in lower accident rates . . .

"Over an extended period of time . . . increases in preventive staff have not resulted in lower accident time-loss accidents. This can mean one of two things: Either increased regulation and education efforts by WCB represents an ineffective strategic choice, or the increased resources have not been applied effectively to activiters which pay off in fewer accidents."

The major portion of staff increases were in the accident prevention branch where salaries and benefits increased 69 per cent in the 1974-75 year and net expenses 67 per cent in the same period.

The report says that the staff expansion had not gone unnoticed by employers, nor had management in the private sector been unaware of WCB inefficiencies.

"Employer concerns that the WCB has extended its role too far into regulation and sanction and that increased regulatory emphasis and expenditure is not helping reduce accident rates," the report says.

"Unions are concerned that WCB inspectors are not taken seriously by employer management representatives, resulting in ineffective regulatory effort."

In layman's language the report outlines criticisms of WCB inspection services, with one company complaining that his plant was visited every three days for a month by one inspector while another company reported that on one occasion he had nine inspectors on a job site at the same time.

There have also been general complaints that the WCB has moved unnecessarily into competition with the volunteer St. John Ambulance Society.

"We offer the opinion . . . that wherever adequate service can be provided (in the teaching of first aid) by a voluntary agency such as St. John's, this service should be utilized."

The report says that while general morale of WCB workers is low, quick improvements could be made by a change in the attitude of management to rank and file employees.

Ex-pitcher dies at 68

SARATOSA (AP) — Wesley "Cheek" Ferrell, a 20-game winner twice in his 15-year major-league baseball pitching career, died Thursday in hospital at the age of 68. Ferrell's career included stints for Brooklyn Dodgers, Boston Braves, Boston Red Sox, Washington Senators, New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians beginning in 1927 and ending after the 1941 season. The Greensboro, N.C., native posted a 21-16 record for the Red Sox in 1935. He had been 20-22 for Cleveland in 1933. The right-hand hurler had an over-all major league record of 129-185.

which benefits may be collected and the number of weeks acautlly worked.

The existing system gives persons who have worked 20 weeks an additional 18 benefits weeks, over and above the other benefits they are entitled to.

The proposed new law would basically give claimants one benefit week for every week worked, to a maximum of 25 weeks. In other words, a person who worked 12 weeks could be entitled to benefits for a basic period of 12 weeks and a person who worked 25 weeks would be entitled to benefits for 25 weeks.

A person who worked more than 25 weeks would be entitled to a further benefit week for every two worked over 25 eeks, to a maximum of 13 benefit weeks. The bill also would entitle claimants to an additional 20 benefit weeks if unemployment in their region was higher than 8.6 per cent. They would be entitled to no regional benefits if the regional unemployment level was four per cent or less.

Your Good Health

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would appreciate your opinion about the extended use of the drug Azulfidine for a case of chronic colitis. I take five grams daily.

I have been told to increase the dosage when the colitis is severe. But since I have been taking it for a few years, the pharmacist questions whether my doctor still wants me to keep taking it.

Could this use have adverse effects? It gives me the feeling of being off balance at times. — Mrs. A. H.

Colitis (co-LITE-us) is inflammation of the large bowel. The drug you name is particularly effective in long-term treatment of this. Your dosage (five grams) is on the lower end of the dosage scale. If you are being seen regularly by your doctor (who can monitor the effects) I see nothing wrong with extended use. You should be reporting your dizziness, which can be one of the side effects.

Drug companies provide doctors with important data about their products. It indicates just when, how and for how long specific drugs should (or should not) be given, including potential reactions, from the commonest (as dizziness) to the rarest types. A good rule without exception) for patients to follow is to report any and all symptoms experienced while on any drug therapy. Doctors are not psychics.

Much of my mail reflects concerns about this or that medication. The simple truth is that just about any chemical substance can cause some side effect, some adverse reaction, in the body. Emphasis here is on the word "can."

Azulfidine, a trade name for salicylazosulfapyridine, is prescribed cautiousy for patients with liver or kidney (such as anemia). Those with damage or blood problems history of allergy or monitored carefully while using the drug and adequate fluid intake is important to avoid kidney stone formation.

This drug is considered preferable, despite any potential reactions, to some of the other drugs used to treat chronic colitis.

Three years is a long time to be taking any medication, although some must be taken for life. Your doctor has concluded that you can continue with yours. He is the only competent judge of this, not your pharmacist.

'Whopping' warmup forecast

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The world's climate is undergoing "a whopping big change" that will result in the warmest weather in 1,000 years within a quarter century, a scientist said Thursday.

William A. Kellogg, of the National Centre for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Col., said the trend will help world food production because of a "greenhouse effect" in the atmosphere that will create a more temperate, rainy earth.

The key to the warming trend is the effect on the earth's atmosphere by the continued use of fossil fuels, such as coal and oil, Kellogg told a meeting of the American Geophysical Union.

Coal and oil give off carbon dioxide that is easily "trapped" in the atmosphere and "changes the heat balance by preventing infra-red radiation from escaping" to a higher level, he said.

Although virtually all of mankind's energy production leads to a warming of the lower atmosphere, nuclear power has "considerably less' heat ejection and therefore a smaller potential for increasing temperatures than coal and oil, Kellogg said.

"By the year 2,000, temperatures will be higher by one degree centigrade," he said. "That is quite a bit — more than any increase in the last 1,000 years. It is a whopping big change. The worldwide increase of carbon dioxide is especially significant."

Last month, three scientists predicted another ice age, but said the increasing emissions of fossil fuel carbon dioxide into the atmosphere may produce a warming trend during the next 100 years.

Soviets 'tightwads'

BRUSSELS (UPI) — America and Britain slammed the Soviet Union Thursday for its tightwad attitude toward the world's poor countries.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland and other speakers at the NATO foreign ministers' conference said the western alliance should reject the Warsaw Pact's call for a new treaty pledging neither side will be the first to use nuclear weapons.

Kissinger defended the principle of detente but he also said the West must remain strong enough and free enough to keep the communist world guessing about how NATO's military strength could be used.

Conference sources reported Kissinger told the closed-door session the West supplies 90 per cent of the transfer of resources that developing countries receive.

Soviet aid to the developing world is pitifully small, Crosland said, and in any case the communists mostly send arms. He told the foreign ministers that Russia has evolved into an imperialist power in the classic manner.

Kissinger said Soviet policy is based on a mean spirit of "petit-bourgeois nationalism" aimed only at promoting the Kremlin's self-interest, the sources said.

He said the Soviets play no appreciable part in world councils such as the north-south conference and other talks between rich and poor countries, and when they do intervene in developing nations it is only to grab opportunities to extend their influence, as in Angola.

'U.S.S.R. shirking'

BRUSSELS (CP) — Canadian External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson told the NATO conference of foreign ministers Thursday that the Soviet Union was not living up to all its obligations under the 1975 Helsinki security agreement.

Jamieson said that Canada is particularly concerned about Soviet inaction on the reunification of families — a key element of the Helsinki agreement.

The minister also met U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger in a separate session to resolve conflicting claims of the U.S. and Canadian 200-mile sea limits to take effect next year.

Rhodesian stalemate

Try next year, say delegates

GENEVA (UPI) — All sides in the Rhodesia conference conceded Thursday the talks were stalemated and should recess until the start of the new year.

"We're all good Christians and we want to spend Christmas at home," said Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith. "Thereafter the conference will be reconvened."

Smith reported "some progress" in his second day of talks with British coonference chairman Ivor Richard, but said he was skeptical about the chances for a final settlement of Rhodesia's transition to black majority rule.

"This year, next year, maybe the following year?" he said.

Richard, who said Smith presented "no new ideas," left for London and talks with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Black nationalists Joshua Nkomo and Bishop Abel Muzorewa left for speeches in London and Salisbury. Smith, who said he needed time for "reflection," was expected to return home this weekend.

The talks, scheduled for a month, opened Oct. 28 and immediately deadlocked for four weeks in debate over a definite date for black rule in the former British colony.

The delegates ran into a deep impasse on the structure of the proposed interim government to run Rhodesia before majority rule. That disagreement continues.

U.K. ready to buy cuts

LONDON (Reuter) — The Labor government reached agreement Thursday on austerity measures needed for Britain to qualify for a $3.9-billion loan from the International Monetary Fund.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey is to detail his package of cuts, expected to be $3.5 billion in a total budget deficit of $17 billion, in Parliament next Wednesday. He hopes, at the same time, to announce agreement with the IMF.

Retirement is just not working.

For many people retirement comes too soon–long before they're financially ready.

And, while you've probably heard it before, we'd like to say it again; the earlier you start saving for your retirement the better.

At the Commerce that's what our SMART Retirement Savings Plan is for–to help you save money for the future, while you get a valuable tax break today.

So the sooner you get SMART the better.

To prove our point, next time you're in a branch of the Commerce, ask us to point out to you the difference in retirement income between someone who starts saving $50 a month at the age of 25 and someone who starts saving $100 at age 45 even though both parties put away the same total dollars.

The difference is astounding. Compounding interest paid in our SMART Retirement Savings Plan is most effective when you give it years to mature.

But that's not the only advantage to SMART.

Since the SMART Retirement Savings Plan is registered with the Government, the money you contribute to your Plan is deductible from your taxable income.

So it all adds up to a tidy retirement cache, and a nice tax break today.

Come talk to us about a SMART Retirement Savings Plan. Because there's more to your future than not working.

A move to curb excesses . . .

OTTAWA appears to be having second thoughts about its hasty rejection of Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell's recommendation that a federal comptroller-general be appointed to restore some stability to the government's prolific spending habits.

Despite its move to bypass Mr. Macdonell's suggestion by establishing a royal commission to look into the matter, it now announces that it intends appointing a chief financial officer for each department, agency and Crown corporation.

Revealing this in answering a question by Conservative House Leader Walter Baker, Treasury Board president Robert Andras said that the government is already looking for suitable people.

Mr. Andras, however, did not have to answer Mr. Baker's second question which was whether the move "marks the first step backward from the sham of the royal commission" as it was ruled out of order by the Speaker of the House as being "clearly argumentative."

However, no matter how argumentative Mr. Baker's question might have been this does not alter the fact that the Trudeau government now appears to realize that it must take more immediate action than that which will result from a lengthy study by the royal commission if it is to retain even a modicum of public confidence.

Although the federal government's payroll will once again skyrocket with the employment of a score or more of highly-paid financial wizards, the money will be well spent if it serves to curb Ottawa's spendthrift practices.

. . . but will it?

IN MOVING TO PROVIDE chief financial officers for the federal departments and agencies, the government still ignores part of the reasoning of the auditor-general in calling for the appointment of a comptroller-general as chief financial officer of the government.

He suggested as factors in the inadequacy of financial controls a lack of recognition among senior officials "of the role a senior departmental financial officer could and should play in assisting them to adminster with prudence, probity and economy the public funds for which they are accountable . . ."

A comptroller-general was needed, he suggested, partly to assist deputy ministers and the like in selecting financial officers or with guidance on the responsibilities they should expect these officers to discharge.

In other words — or so we take it — the departmental and agency financial officers may not be very effective as long as deputy ministers and agency heads don't know what role to give them.

Saanich the dirtiest?

IF MAYOR ED LUM were to make a tour of Saanich, vice president Egon Baumann of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce has said, he would discover his municipality is the dirtiest in all of southern Vancouver Island. According to Mr. Baumann a survey conducted for the chamber showed residents selected Saanich as the dirtiest municipality, with Esquimalt second worst and Oak Bay and Victoria very high in cleanliness.

Of course Mr. Lum could not make any such discovery without touring the other municipalities too, and while we appreciate the chamber's desire to promote tidiness in a community with a fine reputation as a city of gardens, we have some doubts about Mr. Baumann's claim that Saanich, in particular, is filthy: "There is grass growing in the street, leaves in the gutter and paper everywhere. Saanich is a mess."

Parts of Saanich undoubtedly are messy, and most of the time. But by observation other parts are clean most of the time. The same applies in the other Greater Victoria municipalities, and we would suggest that comparative ratings to be beyond question would entail first some definitions of litter and untidiness and then some scientific sampling in all districts. Are leaves in the gutter dirtiness in Saanich and natural beauty in the Uplands?

But Mayor Lum and his council have taken the chamber's rebuke to heart. Mr. Lum says more street-cleaning and park-tidying would mean higher taxes, and has urged residents to help keep the areas clean in front of their own homes. The Saanich police will be asked to "ride herd" on operators of rubbish-carrying vehicles without covers travelling through the municipality; B.C. Hydro will be requested to carry anti-litter posters on its buses and to place garbage containers near bus stops.

It would be a pity, though, if Saanich were to act alone on the problem because of the other municipalities feeling they had been cleared by the study. They all need to do more to persuade their residents to use litter bins. And an anti-litter campaign in the schools would be a good start.

Ottawa Offbeat

'Unreal' goings-on

By RICHARD JACKSON

Think of Parliament not so much as a forum but as a stage.

The action seems more theatrical than political.

Like what they say old-time vaudeville was.

Take a seat in the balcony for the matinee the other day.

The scenario was the federal government's decision to put a royal commission to work on tightening up what Auditor General J. J. Macdonell has termed the administration's "out of control" spending of the $40 billion you are paying it in taxes.

Title it, on all the evidence of past royal commissions and government spending practices, unoriginally: Mission Impossible.

The dialogue centered on the appointment of one of the four royal commissioners, Marcel Caron, a former director of the Crown Corporation, Atomic Energy of Canada Limited.

Principals of the piece were Prime Minister Trudeau, Treasury Board President Robert Andras, former Conservative prime minister, John Diefenbaker, and Speaker James Jerome.

A Commons-full of MPs were the extras.

There was no script. It was all ad-lib.

The first act opened with the Conservative Opposition asking the prime minister how Mr. Caron could serve on the Royal Commission since he would be, in a sense, investigating himself, as a former director of Atomic Energy, the Crown Corporation under intense attack in the auditor general's report.

Enter then, Mr. Andras, handing Mr. Trudeau a couple of sheets of paper.

"The President of the Treasury Board hands me a letter," he ad-libs, "from Mr. Caron in which he says he will not be able to serve on the royal commission."

Mr. Andras returned to his seat and Mr. Trudeau offered to table Mr. Caron's letter.

As a Commons page approached to take the letter to the clerk's table, Mr. Trudeau said, in an audible aside: "You'd better get it from Bob."

"Bob," of course, was Mr. Andras, who was hesitant about surrendering his letter, but finally with reluctance did. And it was tabled.

Mr. Diefenbaker sauntered over, picked up the letter, and a moment later was back at his desk, up on his feet in protest.

The letter tabled by Mr. Trudeau, he stormed, was no letter at all.

It was nothing but a typewritten few lines, "just a piece of paper," not even signed.

True, the name Marcel Caron was appended, but had been typed, not written. It could have come from anyone.

What, thundered the indignant Dief, was the prime minister trying to do in hoodwinking the House with a mere "scrap of paper," and smuggling it into the parliamentary record?

Mr. Trudeau threw up his hands in a bewildered "what's the use" gesture.

And up popped Bob Andras.

It wasn't really a letter . . "as such," he confessed, but "it will be shortly."

In fact, it was a copy of a letter which was at that very moment on its way from Mr. Caron's Montreal office.

Meanwhile, as it sped by special messenger to Ottawa, Mr. Caron had dictated its text over the phone to Mr. Andras, who had taken it immediately to the Commons and handed it over to the prime minister.

So what was the problem, asked Mr. Andras in all wounded innocence, knowing full well what was to come.

The problem, the Opposition was quick to point out, was that permission had been given to table a letter that wasn't a letter at all, so permission must be withdrawn.

But the real problem was Speaker Jerome's. He confessed he didn't know how to "untable" a document already tabled, so he wasn't going to try.

"There is something unreal going on here, Mr. Speaker," commented the prime minister.

There are days like this in Parliament. More and more of them all the time.

The prime minister had the correct word for it, "unreal" . . . and the unreality increases.

Sitting in the way of an earthquake?

By GAMINI SENEVIRATNE

We are in an Age of Earthquakes, experts warn. The period up to the middle 1980s will be one of exceptional tectonic activity.

The disaster in Turkey marks the 20th severe earthquake this year. Billions of dollars worth of property and perhaps a quarter of a million lives have been lost.

In fact roughly one million earthquakes occur every year and several hundred of them cause considerable damage locally. Humans have always lived in terror of earthquakes, although until relatively recently the fear was the individual one of being literally swallowed alive.

Today whole cities can be levelled in seconds, if only because we lived in cities, and thousands perish from falling debris alone. The growth of human population perhaps leaves no alternative but to live with the risk, although several million people have paid the ultimate penalty in the past 50 years or so.

Need this be? At the recent World Human Settlements Conference in Vancouver the issue was raised by the Nicaraguan Vice-Minister of Urban Planning, Ivan Osorio.

His plea was that natural disasters cannot be averted but planning could minimize the consequences. Few delegations took more than passing notice and the matter went almost totally unreported in the world's press.

Yet Osorio, a trained architect, should know. He is in charge of the operation to rebuild the city of his birth from scratch. His city, Managua, was razed by an earthquake a few years before Ivan Osorio was born. Thousands of lives were lost, but the place was rebuilt, much as it was before.

About this time of year, just before Christmas, in 1972, Managua was levelled by an earthquake for the second time. More than 10,000 people died and twice the number injured. Yet it need not have been, says Osorio. He is making sure it will not happen yet again.

In building the new Managua, the Nicaraguans first made a thorough, 14-month geological study of the site of the city. They found among other things that there are three major north-south rifts running parallel across the region. The new city is being designed — from buildings, to water pipes and fire-fighting services — and sited to accommodate the faults.

The frightening thought which Osorio articulated in Vancouver and which everybody seemed to side-step, is that practically no urban settlement on earth today has much idea of the ground on which it stands.

If the "city fathers" were to study that ground, they may well feel they should move their offices, schools and hospitals, re-deploy their services and even re-design their buildings. Are you sitting in the way of an earthquake?

In very simplified terms, an earthquake is the end result of shifts in the earth's crust, themselves often caused by disturbances hundreds of kilometres further below.

In a stressed zone, two giant movements of the crust occur in opposite directions. They bend and stretch and reach breaking point. The earthquake is caused when they abruptly rupture and return to roughly their pre-stressed positions.

Most of the natural stress areas of the earth, those where the earthquake danger is highest and most constant, have been identified.

It is known that the major earthquake belts lie along continental edges and off-shore-island arcs, where the large rigid plates of the earth's crust suddenly plunge. But, beyond this, very little is known of the structure and causes of earthquakes.

One of the major thrusts of the study of earthquakes has been towards predicting them. In February this year, delegates from 45 countries met in Paris for the Intergovernmental Conference on the Assessment and Mitigation of Earthquake Risk.

At this meeting, China's Liu Ying-yung, director of his country's State Seismological Bureau, described how the Liaoning province was monitored for 10 years and how the major earthquake, which occurred in Haicheng in February 1975, was predicted, and mitigating action taken in time to prevent loss of life.

Impressive and important though the information was, it remains a fact that prediction of earthquakes is still so uncertain that scientists are unlikely, as a rule, to warn us of their fears. The big earthquake at Tangshan last July, in which it is rumored 100,000 died, took the Chinese totally by surprise.

As several American seismologists have pointed out, the margin or error in prediction is so great particularly in densely populated areas, that more expense and damage could be caused by the evacuation than the earthquake itself.

To complicate the problem further, man has recently been disturbing the earth's structure so much that we may be causing more earthquakes than nature does. There are many instances in which even modest irrigation works like dams and wells, for example, have caused local earthquakes and loss of human life.

Even passing trains cause earth tremors. So what does an underground nuclear explosion do?

From Vietnam

By BRIAN EADES from Sangkhla

On a moonless night, Maj. Tran Huu Trai lifted his 84-year-old mother onto his back and set off in search of his fast disappearing vision of freedom and affluence.

It was the climax of schemes mapped out earlier this year, shortly after his release following seven months in a Viet Cong re-education camp.

First, he had planned to buy a boat to take himself, his wife, their 10 children and his aged mother out of re-unified, socialist Vietman. "But I realized it would only arouse suspicions if a former army major suddenly took up deep-sea fishing."

Later, he proposed to a boat-owning friend that he would search out the fuel and a safe disembarkation point in return for passage. The friend agreed, and without revealing the scheme to them, Trai moved his wife and family to a small farm, near Vung Tau, on the coast to the south of Ho Chi Minh City, which used to be known as Saigon.

Over the months he built up a store of black market diesel oil, and "every day and every night I took a fishing net, and scouted the coastline for a spot free of police and Viet Cong."

Finally, he was there on the windswept deserted beach, using an inflated inner tube to ferry his family out to the 30-foot fishing boat already loaded with 33 other people.

Home now is one of several dozen bamboo and corrugated iron shanties crammed together here in Thailand behind barbed wire on a stretch of waterlogged beach 100 yards long by 20 yards wide.

Behind the small sign which alerts visitors to the fact that it is a "restricted area" live 740 Vietnamese refugees, all with stories much like that told by Major Trai. About half have moved back onto their boats, moored behind the camp, in a vain attempt to avoid the overcrowding and the torrential monsoon rains which thick plastic tarpaulins do little to keep off.

The lucky ones sleep in hammocks or raised beds. Others sleep on the crude benches of the "school house" where adults and children spend their days learning French and English in anxious anticipation of their resettlement.

That they have any food or shelter is thanks largely to Per-Axel Hansson, a Swedish Baptist missionary, and his wife Ingmarie. Unlike Singapore, Malaysia and Indonesia, which give food and fuel to the Vietnamese refugee boats and then send them packing, Thailand does allow them to land. But it does so reluctantly. There are over 76,000 refugees from Indochina living in camps throughout Thailand and Thai officials are so anxious that they do not become sufficiently comfortable that they should want to stay.

"They'll all be going to America or France," said one of the four young Thai policemen guarding the camp. "They cannot stay here, all they do is eat and sleep."

But they continue to come, and the flow is increasing. Last month alone, 599 people arrived aboard 22 boats. According to the refugees, the authorities recently put guards aboard all boats in Saigon harbor, organized efficient registration of boat owners and have arrested thousands of people trying to leave during the last 18 months. Many more have been lost at sea.

All the refugees complain terly about life in Vietnam. Major Trai said he had been prepared to join the revolution, but said he was denied a job, his sons were denied places in the university, and all that seemed to await them was the harsh conditions of the new economic zones. "Even the coolies don't like the VC; their lives haven't improved," he said.

The rumors are rife: The population of Ho Chi Minh City is to be reduced from three to one million; there's to be nation-wide conscription of all young men aged 15 and over. Clearly, for many people, the quality of life has taken a nosedive. But equally important are the rumors filtering back into Vietnam.

The refugees believe Jimmy Carter will welcome more Vietnamese into America. They think the new vehemently anti-Communist regime in Thailand will welcome them with open arms. And they know very well that the winter storms will make the trip even more hazardous from now until next spring.

Song pollution

From The Christian Science Monitor

Popular songs have been quavering on the line between light romance and heavy amour since before the days of June-moon-spoon. But the innocence of the lyrics — or their sophisticated manipulation — at least left something to the ear of the beholder. The suspicion of a hard-core double meaning would keep a song off the radio and, as for the single meaning, every word was respectable. In short, it was possible to hear no evil unless thinking made it so.

No more. The sex-in-songs situation has become so blatant that some radio stations want to see the words in print before they air them. And we know of at least one poor soul assigned or condemned to listen closely enough through the electric jangle to screen the records for student dances.

The point is that the screening ought to be done, as the Rev. Jesse Jackson suggests, by those purveying the songs. Many of them are not just sexy but sexist, dinning into a new generation stereotypes of sexual relations that the country has been trying to throw off.

The barrage of songs about sex without responsibility understandably appalls Mr. Jackson, head of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity). It is logical for him to accompany his moral crusade among black young people with a campaign to get sexually suggestive songs off the air. To dispel this broadcast pollution would be a favor to all.

Individuals could help by not buying the records or adding to the audience of offending stations. But Mr. Jackson rightly thinks the broadcasters should take more responsibility for the kind of influence they exercise. He plans a media ethics conference, and we hope the industry delegates do not merely give it lip service and let the malady linger on.

MY OPINIONS, YOUR READING . . .

No, I can't bring myself to any great outpouring of sympathy for the hotels of British Columbia in their failure to receive the necessary approval for the sale of hard booze in their beer parlors. There are surely enough hard liquor outlets now without adding to them in the cacaphonous swill palaces. The hotels are doing just fine in a profit sense on their present drinking establishemnts. As for neighborhood pubs, why? Surely nobody is naive enough to really believe we here in British Columbia could emulate the British Isles neighborhood pub concept. Britain's neighborhood pubs show a sanity that would never prevail in Canada and once again — why more outlets that would merely compound the excessive consumption we now have. That is, of course, unless we are trying to establish a record for alcoholism . . .

INSIPID is the only reasonable evaluation I can find for the new look of the CBC late night TV newscast. The fanfare that preceded the appointment of Peter Kent as the anchorman to succeed the departed Lloyd Robertson, has not been justified by the Kent performance. He is deadly dull and that dullness seems to permeate the whole news package. Saturday nights are different — that's when Kent has his night off and George Finstad takes over. George comes across as a friendly neighbor and why the CBC had to go on a big manhunt for a Robertson replacement when Finstad was readily available, I'll never fathom. Sooner or later the Kent presence will result in lower ratings for the CBC late evening news . . .

I HAVE LOOKED and looked hard, for signs of economic recession in our town this Christmas season. I have not been able to find it — certainly not in the stores downtown, nor in the shopping centres. The crowds are thick as usual and any managers I've talked with, say sales are great. One said business has never been better at this time of year . . .

THERE ARE TIMES when even the veterans come up with sheepish grins. Kirk Davis had been a veteran disc jockey at CFAX, and with 13 years at that station, was the oldest on-air personality. But Kirk decided 13 years was enough, wanting to spend full time in his boat-selling business.

The brass at CFAX threw a retirement party for Davis, everyone having a fine time. Then Kirk excused himself so as to tape his final show. Spent an hour and a half on it and rejoined the party. One small mistake — Kirk had forgotten to punch the record button and so had an hour and a half of blank tape. Bet Nixon wishes the same malfunction had hit the White House tape installation . . .

GETTING BACK to our recession. I can't think of a more amazing sales record than the sales record of Electrolux — the door-to-door vacuum cleaner sales company.

I keep figuring this company has to sooner or later run out of prospects, but not so. In the month of October, for instance, door-to-door salesmen in the Victoria area sold 1,125 new units. And how about one salesman up in Dawson Creek — he sold 110 new units in that area in the month of October. Means if a good salesman has a good product, he'll sell — and make a good living . . .

IN RETROSPECT, why all the fuss about Quebec having a referendum re separation from the rest of Canada? Was there any great national fuss exhibited when Newfoundland held a referendum to join Canada? As for Prime Minister Trudeau's statement that all of Canada should vote on such a separation issue, might not this backfire on Mr. Trudeau? Suppose such a referendum was held and suppose Quebec residents voted to stay in Canada — but citizens in the rest of Canada voted to have Quebec separate. What, then, would the prime minister do? Would he tell Quebec that Quebec was no longer wanted in Canada, or would he forget the national referendum and point to the Quebec vote as the only relative vote? Would be a very interesting situation and one that could happen.

Living so good on farms Central Asians stay put

The Los Angeles Times

The Soviet Union has an "employment problem" here in Central Asia. The people won't leave the farms. Since the Soviet constitution forbids unemployment, all are put to work — with up to eight doing the job of one in some cases.

This might be dismissed as an amusing effect of Marxist dogma. But the basic cause — a Central Asian population growing five times faster than the national average but virtually stagnant in rural areas — will have increasingly serious consequences for the whole country.

One-fourth of the total Soviet population growth now comes from Central Asia, and between 1970 and 1999, fully half will come from here. In the next decade, the bulk of the able-bodied entries into the work force — those aged 15 to 25 — will come from the five republics in this region — Kirgizia, Tadjikistan, Turkmenia, Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan.

If there is no massive migration from farms to cities in these republics and in the Russian Republic itself — which is where most Soviet industry is located and future expansion planned — the economic consequences for the country could be very significant.

And if there is such a movement of Asiatic peoples, whether by persuasion or pressure, the social impact in Slavic Russia could also be significant.

Some Western analysts also see political and military repercussions in the buildup of population in the non-Slavic southern tier, a problem summed up here as "East won't go West."

A major reason why Uzbeks don't want to leave the farm is that the living is very good. "People in cities write asking to come here for our good wages and good living conditions," said Bilyi Mavlyanov, director of a cotton collective near here.

The average wage is 165 rubles ($217) a month, which is 75 per cent more than the average income of a Russian collective farmer, and at least 10 per cent better than the average of an industrial worker in a city.

More important are the extras provided on a profitable southern kolhoz, or collective.

In cities, apartments are cramped and badly built. Here, attractive three-room co-operative flats with high ceilings and low interest rates can be purchased from the kolhoz.

"The (Uzbek) villages have rejected the stereotype Russian (apartment) housing of the 1960s and are building roomy and comfortable houses" with touches of traditional architectural style of the region, wrote noted sociologist Victor Perevedentsev in an article on Central Asia.

"The higher the living standard in the rural area, the less that population strives to live in cities," he wrote. He was implicitly saying that authorities can force more people off the farms by cutting the profitability of kolhozes.

Uzbekistan has a greater proportion of its population in rural areas than any of the other Central Asian republics. Pravda Vostoka, the Uzbek party paper, focused on Khorezm province here to complain about the effects of non-migration by youth.

"Whole classes of former students, by staying in their native kolhoz or sovhoz (state farm), contribute to the decrease in over-all employment of its workers," it said, for "despite actual increases in crop yields, (their addition to the work force means that) labor productivity decreases."

Suggestions have been made that rural youth be more deliberately "oriented to city life and city professions" in hopes of moving them off the farm after graduation from school.

The effort to stimulate migration from rural to urban areas in Central Asia — now an insignificant four persons per thousand — contrasts with the Soviet propaganda message to Russian farmers to stay on the farm.

For while the rural population of Central Asia rose 13 per cent in the past five years, the rural populaton of the Slavic Russians dropped 15 per cent, creating a serious manpower shortage on Russian farms.

Projections say the differences in population growth and migration patterns will grow bigger in coming decades.

Central Asia, now with only 13 per cent of the total Soviet population, will contribute 15 times more to its growth than Russia by 1990, and 300 times by the year 2000.

No attempt is being made to curb the exploding population here. Quite the reverse. An Uzbek official was apologetic recently that his republic's birthrate (32.8 per thousand) is second to Tadjikstan. "We would like to be first and will be first in the future," he said.

Bible clear

We strongly protest Dean Brian Whitlow's denunciation of women Anglican priests and his statement that the Church has been dealt a "grievous blow.".

Can the Bible be any clearer on the subject than the following?

"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Jesus Christ." (Galations 3:28)

With this statement Paul radically alters his earlier implications about the subordination of women and, in fact, implies a new equality in Christ. (See also I Cor. 11: 11-12)

Earlier statements by Paul follow the religious presuppositions of Judaism at the time. But Paul worked with several women in his ministry; Chloe (I Cor. 1:11); his friends Priscilla and Aquila were mentioned in other references to the Corinthian ministry, and Phoebe (Rom. 16) was Paul's fellow worker and patroness of the Church.

It is not theology, but established traditional social custom adopted by the Church which prevents women from fulfilling their full potential when called to serve God.

Difference

To answer your reader (Col. Dec. 5) who asked the difference between world federalism and world communism:

World federalism is a non-partisan organization with national branches in 35 countries, supporters in many more, and all-party parliamentary association in 20 countries. It is supported voluntarily by dues and gifts from concerned world citizens who believe that national governments are no longer capable of safeguarding the condition of human existence, and that it is essential to create world institutions to deal with world problems, with each nation guaranteed the freedom to manage its own domestic affairs.

World federalists believe that the world must be made safe for diversity — of race, religion, nationality, economic systems, and cultural values. I think that the goals of world communism are rather different.

The world federalist organization has worked out practical steps toward the goal of world peace through world law.

Savings

I left school about 62 years ago, when I was 12 years of age, but it is my desire to impart some of the small amount of knowledge that I have, to save the citizens of B.C. a lot of thousand-dollar bills, to wit, clean those formerly beautiful waterways we have in B.C.

The solution is quite simple. During the First World War, I lived in Toronto, and the Toronto Street Railway would at times give we youngsters a free trip by streetcar and ferry to the three islands in Toronto Bay, namely Ward, Centre and Hanlan. Now there happened to be lagoons on those islands where the water was as clear as crystal, and I could plainly see the fish: they were carp. Lots of carp. Big, fat, healthy carp.

They ate the weeds, and made a good job of it. Then of course the Torontonians expressed their gratitude by eating many carp. The fish are poached, flaked and with spices added are very nice. (I am not going to give you any cooking lessons.)

Enough is enough. I have told you how to rid the lakes and rivers of weeds, and of course you will proceed forthwith and build a hatchery for raising these carp, not forgetting of course to show your appreciation by sending me a nice gratituity which will of course, be cordially accepted. Well, that's it folks. Please read the story of the Carp Farm in the Islander of the Colonist of Nov. 21.

Bilingual

Re: Mrs. Kerfoot's Closed and Mrs. Kennedy's Take it (Col. Dec. 4).

Wow! It seems that I have two gentle B.C. ladies on my back. I also thought the discussions on bilingualism and Quebec's Bill 22 were becoming obsolescent, in view of the PQ victory in Quebec. In two years, after the Quebec referendum, Canada should become a unilingual federated country made up of nine provinces, while Quebec will adopt Fench as its official language.

Bourassa lost the last Quebec election partly because he promised to amend Bill 22 if he was re-elected: The amendment would have rendered the law completely useless. French-speaking Quebecers were incensed by this show of weakness and voted massively against the Liberals.

I came to B.C., Mrs. Kennedy, of my own free will to study English. I love B.C. weather and scenery. I enjoy my studies at the University of Victoria and I consider my medieval history teacher as one of the best in the country. (If this type of compliment doesn't give me an "A" for my mid-tern exam, I'll eat my shirt).

There was no need for me to justify Quebec's policies on language and minority rights as they are 10 times better than the ones used in B.C. However, I couldn't refrain from correcting some of the incredibly erroneous statements on Quebec made by some B.C. citizens. I quite understand your frustration. In reading my letters, you realized how far you were from the truth, and I presume that it was very painful for you to admit that your old pre-conceived views on Quebec were wrong. Our predominantly French federal government, as you called it, is composed of 75 French-speaking and 189 English-speaking MPs. Even in Swahili schools, those figures would tend to prove that your claim is slightly off the beam.

I have no intention, God forbid, to stop fulfilling your destiny, but when you want to get rid of everybody who doesn't think the way you do, permit me to tell you that Rene Levesque, the man who wants to break our country, told the English Quebecers that they would be welcomed in an independent Quebec. Does this mean that Levesque would be more broadminded than certain B.C. citizens?

YVON LANDRY,

A news item in the Colonist stated that Ms. J. Dorgan was the first woman to be a member of the Nanaimo County Bar Association executive.

This statement is not accurate. Miss Elsie Hall, barrister and solicitor of Nanaimo has held executive positions on the association numerous times. Her positions included secretary-treasurer, etc. She held office in 1958, 1963, 1964, 1965 and at other times.

Cuba is working hard to rebuild government

By JAMES NELSON GOODSELL

Cuba took a long step last week toward restructuring its government.

On Dec. 2 a newly formed National Assembly met in Havana for the first time, one day after a structural change split up the island's present six provinces into 15 new provincial units.

The moves were part of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro's effort to institutionalize the revolution he began 20 years ago.

Moreover, they were part of an effort to bring Cuba's 9.6 million people into the political process.

Since February, when the Cuban people approved a new constitution for the island replacing the document of 1940, there has been a series of elections to name delegates to the National Assembly.

The elections, which actually began in a dress rehearsal in the small province of Mantanzas in July, 1974, are aimed at allowing the Cuban people, rather than the Communist party, to carry out many of the tasks of running the government.

The Communist party may well hover over the scene, but the electoral process, known as the "people's power program," does give the Cuban citizen something of a say in government.

Critics of Castro's government argue that the change is little more than window dressing and that Cuba is still ruled with an iron fist by Castro and his immediate associates.

This criticism notwithstanding, the changes which took place in governing apparatus of the island this past week amount to a major reform of the Cuban political system.

Moreover, it needs to be noted that the elections of the past year and those contemplated in the future offer a degree of freedom of choice unknown in Cuba in the 18 years since Castro came to power.

The changes spring from the failure in 1970 of the much-publicized goal to produce 10 million tons of sugar. Castro assumed the blame for the failure, but he added that part of the problem was too much centralization of power and decision-making authority in Havana.

The Communist party, he and others said, simply had too much of the reins of power in its hands. It was argued that the party could not possibly make adequate decisions for the provinces in all cases.

This led to the planning for a new constitution, establishment of a National Assembly, the system of elections, and the breakup of the six provinces into smaller units.

The new provincial setup is a major administrative change. While the western provinces of Pinar del Rio, Habana, and Matanzas remain roughly as before, the three eastern provinces of Las Villas, Camaguey, and Oriente are broken into 10 provinces.

The city of Havana is separated also from the province, and the Isle of Pines, which was administered by Pinar del Rio province, becomes a separate municipality.

Some of the names of the new provinces ring with the mystique of the Cuban revolution: Cienfuegos, carved out of part of the former Las Villas, was named for Castro's former comrade in arms, Camilo Cienfuegos, who mysteriously disappeared 17 years ago; Granma, which is carved out of the former Oriente, is named for the yacht that carried Castro and his fellow revolutionaries to the island in 1956 to begin their successful rebellion against dictator Fulgencio Batista.

Quasar Pete was off ½ to $8¼ and Canada Southern Pete 20 cents to $3.10.

MDS Health Group Ltd. was the largest of the 29 block trades with 50,000 shares at $2.50 a share.

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. was second with 17,600 shares at $16 a share, followed by 17,000 shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd. at $14 a share.

Overseas investment held blameless

Outdated mills hurt MB

VANCOUVER (CP) — Outdated equipment has cut productivity of MacMillan-Bloedel's coastal logging operations, but overseas investments are not to blame, Calvert Knudsen, corporation president, said Wednesday.

Knudsen said in a television interview part of the industry's problem in meeting market competition stems from obsolete forestry plants and a lower grade of timber.

"Some of this obsolescence came upon us suddenly," he said.

He indicated money spent on the company's overseas subsidiaries has not slighted operations in B.C. Although MB has been "a relatively aggressive investor" in other parts of the world for the last 17 years, 70 per cent of more than $1 billion has been spent on B.C. operations, he said.

"At the time those (overseas) investments were made, the situation was such that there was no great necessity to deal with the (obsolescence) issue," he said.

Knudsen linked problems of outdated equipment to the quality of timber as logging operations extend to higher elevations.

"A lower grade log now is being produced by the harvest operators," he said, pointing to a decrease in log size and a shift from Douglas fir to hemlock, cedar and balsam.

He said the problem was foreseeable: "All of the tree farms operators on the coast can practically tell log by log for the next 20 years what their cut is going to be.

"But you can't invest in new plants until the log flows have changed," he said. Before the shift in timber, "The old plants were perfectly fine."

The company now plans to invest in modern equipment for conversion plants "to match new technology to those log flows," he said.

Knudsen's comments followed his detailed explanation Tuesday of Christmas layoffs of nearly half of MB's 16,850 employees in the province. He attributed the layoffs to excessively high inventories and slack markets.

"I'm attaching no blame to anyone or any side," he said. "I'd much rather search for a solution to the problem."

But he said labor costs in B.C. are substantially higher than those elsewhere. While he dismissed the possibility of wage cuts as "not realistic," he called for "the utmost in restraint," when it comes to wage demands.

He also asked for work rules to increase efficiency at every level of the corporation and for economic measures on the part of labor, government and management to improve the industry's financial outlook.

Knudsen, who took on the job of company president three months ago, said he felt his position left him open to being "accused of being some kind of 90-day wonder coming up to British Columbia and telling people what their problems are."

He said the worst of MB's financial problems were already solved, but that the over-all state of the forest industry was a long-term problem, despite expectations the world economic state will improve.

Cuts in taxation would help out

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction industry spokesmen called Thursday for major income tax cuts of at least $1.5 to $2 billion in 1977 to stimulate the economy and spur investment.

Henry de Puyjalon, president of the Canadian Construction Association, told a news conference that government policies are needed to soak up unused productive capacity in the economy and increase investment.

"The way to do it is to pass on income tax cuts of major importance."

Construction industry economists said tax cuts would help the industry by taking some of the heat out of wage demands by workers in bargaining next spring and could also reduce unemployment by about one-half a percentage point: November's jobless rate was 7.3 per cent.

The construction industry, while benefiting early from the federal anti-inflation controls because of wage rollbacks, has now run into a phase in which business is not investing in new projects.

De Puyjalon said new housing starts in 1977 are also likely to fall to 230,000 from 250,000 this year. Housing accounts for about 25 per cent of the construction business.

Tax reductions would give the industry a boost later in 1977.

Gold surge

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold surged ahead on European exchanges Thursday following the International Monetary Fund's fifth bullion auction. The U.S. dollar had a lackluster day.

An ounce of gold sold for $137 in London at the close, up from $135.625 the day before. It closed in Zurich at $136.50, up from $135.75.

The boost came after the IMF accepted bids Wednesday for 780,000 ounces of its gold holdings at $137 an ounce, a higher price than the metal had been trading in Europe.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 3 p.m. Thursday at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 1,125 cattle, 30 calves and 573 hogs. Sales were mainly slaughter cows, the balance being slaughter steers and heifers. Slaughter steers sold under pressure at 50 cents lower than Wednesday afternoon's close. Slaughter heifers, with only one good package, sold fully steady with a moderate demand. All slaughter cows sold a full $1 lower during late trading due to narrow demands. The bulk of the cows on offer were of the D2-4 type. Good bulls sold 50 cents lower with a firm export demand. Cows D1-2 17-19; D3 16-17.50; D4 14.50-16. Hogs: 573 hogs sold at Calgary assembly points. Low 52.85, high 53.00, average 52.89.

Flying Services tries new ways

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

The new owners and manager of Victoria Flying Services Ltd. have cut out a busy path to follow in order to get the company into what they feel is its proper niche in the area's transportation picture. That slot, they feel, can best be filled by a quick-to-respond charter service, improvements on their scheduled route and a new public image.

Two veteran Victoria airport figures, each with his own established company, have put their resources together into a partnership and this past summer bought the 18-year-old company just shortly before its previous owner and founder died.

Nils Christensen, president of Viking Air, an aircraft repair and overhaul firm, and his partner Courtney Griffiths, who owns Griffiths Avionics, now have ownership of Victoria Flying Services. They bought it for an un-William Sylvester last July disclosed sum from the late and just recently bought up the share held by Robert Paterson, a partner of Sylvester's.

The two, busy with their own companies, have taken on a former chief pilot with VFS, Ed Davis, and he is the company's general manager and operations manager. The new management trio enthused about their plans in an interview Thursday.

Some of them:

● Renegotiation of the firm's lease in the Inner Harbor of the wharf that is the Victoria end of the three-times-a-day service to downtown Vancouver;

● The setting up of a feeder system of small float planes to gather Gulf Islands passengers at Ganges for connections with the Victoria-Vancouver service;

● The establishment of a "line facility" centre on the east side of the airport for visiting light aircraft. Fuels and repairs for the planes and ground facilities for pilots and passengers will be features. This will begin in about two weeks.

● The application for a licence to operate a before-and after-hours service between the Victoria and Vancouver airports, supplementing present service by Pacific Western Airlines and Air Canada;

● Upgrading of the present pilot training program.

General manager Davis said that the company is of the opinion that there is a growing market that is slowly reaching B.C., one that requires the availability of twin-engined float and land planes, plus amphibians, that will be able to cover the entire west coast.

"This is one of the last areas of the world that makes flying such an adventure. But we're not utilizing the aircraft in the manner that it could be," he said.

"For instance, did you know that you couldn't fly a float plane very far south in the United States? There's no place south of Oregon to refuel," Davis added.

The company has received some unfavorable publicity in past in comments raised by Victoria city council, particularly with regard to wharf rentals that were claimed to be in arrears. Then there is a group that protests the presence of float plane traffic in the harbor for noise and safety factors.

Davis and Griffiths, however, feel strongly that there is a place for the planes.

"It's one of the few places that such planes can be used in their proper capacity. We and our competitors have proven that people want the service," Griffiths said. The competitors, Air West, now handle in excess of 20,000 annually on the route.

Under the new lease arrangement, which haven't been fully settled, Davis admitted, the city will receive a good rental and the company hopes to be established on more than a month-to-month basis which has been the case in past.

Victoria Flying Services has been moving people out of the harbor all over the coast since 1966. Air West got started in the same capacity two years later, and recently announced that it was expanding its service to downtown Seattle in the spring.

Christensen, who is also company president (Griffiths is secretary-treasurer), is facility. He said that it will operate out of the hangar that he and Griffiths lease from enthused about the new line the provincial government. The VFS operation remains on the airport's west side, where it owns its hangar.

"It will mean that those executive planes that park now over at the main terminal will come over here for our services," he said.

Christensen and Griffiths have the service. They can repair just about anything to be found on the aircraft of today, outside of engine overhaul. Both have built their businesses up over the last 10 years where they've taken over the entire hangar and they no longer have to go out and hunt up business — it comes to them because they're one of the few, and certainly the biggest on the west coast of Canada.

And about that image problem. One of the answers is being found in the paint shop, where each of the company's 20 planes will go for a new coat which will be a basic white and orange, with yellow and brown stripes.

Bond failure

MONTREAL (CP) — A $13-million bond issue by surburban Laval has been rejected by United States investors who are apparently wary about the recent election of the pro-separatist Parti Quebecois government, says Mayor Lucien Paiement.

Lakefield headmaster Guest points to prince's dormitory

Young prince to board in Ontario

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Terence Guest, headmaster at nearby Lakefield College School, said Thursday he will consider it a honor and a considerable amount of responsibility having Prince Andrew as a student starting in January.

The 16-year-old prince, second in line to the British throne, will arrive in Canada Jan. 5 and remain at Lakefield until June, it was announced Thursday by Government House in Ottawa.

The prince will follow a full program of studies at the Grade 12 level during the winter and spring terms and will be boarding at the school.

He now attends Gordonstoun, a school in Scotland which has an arrangement with Lakefield for the exchange of students.

Mr. Guest said in an interview the prince will be treated like any other student. Staff members, he said, will call him Prince Andrew and other students will call him Andrew.

A spokesman for the RCMP said they will have an officer at the school the entire time Prince Andrew is enrolled.

In London, Buckingham Palace said the prince is "very happy at the prospect" of attending Lakefield and said he has been "involved in this plan from the beginning."

The palace also said British Prime Minister James Callaghan and Prime Minister Trudeau had been consulted on the matter.

At the request of the Queen, Col. Frank McEachern of Toronto—senior aide to the governor-general, and president of the Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme in Canada—has agreed to take general responsibility for Prince Andrew while he is in Canada.

Andrew's older brother, Prince Charles, spent six months at Timbertop, a grammar school near Melbourne, Australia, while he was attending Gordonstoun.

Lakefield is open to male students only and its academic program covers Grades 6 to 13. Currrently 215 boarding students and 25 day students attend the school.

The school has an active sports program with emphasis on cross-country skiing and hockey in the winter. During the spring and fall terms, it offers sailing, canoeing, swimming, horseback riding, cricket, rugger and Canadian football.

Andrew
. . . 'involved since start'

The prince is known to be a gliding enthusiast and also interested in soccer and rugby.

Parents pay tuition of $4,625 a year to board boys at Lakefield, where academic training concentrates on basics. Boys in Grades 12 and 13 have the option of taking Latin, computer science, economics, native studies or comparitive religious courses.

The prince will receive additional training in subjects such as English so he will be able to write examinations in Britain where the system requires more specifics than the general Canadian curriculum provides.

The prince will share a room with Donald Grant, 18, of Brooklin, Ont., in Ashelworth House on the school grounds.

The two roomed together while Donald was attending Gordonstoun as an exchange student.

"I'm happy," Donald said. "But I've roomed with him before. He's an interesting guy, funny."

The prince will be met by Ontario Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon when he arrives at Toronto International Airport Jan. 5.

No cruel revenge —student trustee

WOODBRIDGE, Ont. — Jim Corcoran, a Grade 13 student elected as a trustee on the York county board of education, has technically become his principal's boss but will still have to attend classes and abide by school rules, the principal said Wednesday. Principal Stan Meyers of Woodbridge high school said he does not think Corcoran would ever take advantage of the situation. As a member of the 20-man board, Corcoran negotiates salaries and has hiring and firing powers over the principals and 1,160 teachers in the school board just north of Toronto.

WASHINGTON — Carl Bernstein, whose Watergate reporting with Bob Woodward won a Pulitzer Prize for the Washington Post in 1973, said here he will leave The Post Jan. 1 to concentrate on book writing. "It's very hard to leave The Post, but I've worked for newspapers since I was 16 years old — half my life — and I want to try other kinds of journalism," he said. Bernstein joined The Post in 1966. Woodward, who continues as a Post investigative reporter, called his association with Bernstein "the most rewarding professional experience of my life."

State department spokesman John H. Trattner admitted Thursday the two public accusations by Seoul less than 24 hours apart had strained relations between the two countries. "We have conveyed to the Korean government our view that statements made yesterday and today by the government of South Korea on our relationship were not helpful," Trattner said.

JOHANNESBURG — An appeal court Thursday refused to send a crusading South African editor to jail for protecting the identity of a black informant. LONDON — Graham Day, who was to head Britain's shipbuilding industry after nationalization, resigned Thursday because of Parliament's failure to pass the government's bill authorizing state control of the firms. Day, a 43-year-old Canadian, was appointed chief executive of the proposed supervisory body, British Shipbuilders, last year.

Lillooet council welcomes new jail

LILLOOET (CP) — In its search for economic stability, council in this Fraser Canyon community has accepted a proposal that will put dangerous convicts on its doorstep.

Next July, construction is expected to begin on a federal maximum-security penitentiary for 192 prisoners.

It is part of a national program by the Canadian Penitentiary Service to build smaller prisons to replace troubled centres such as the British Columbia penitentiary, a century-old relic with a record of riots and hostage-takings.

Medium-security prisons are also in the works but the federal government wants to act quickly to isolate the dangerous prisoners, who studies say are most likely to cause unrest.

Despite repeated demands by the public for the government to do something about the prison system, most communities don't want the prisons near them.

However, a local Committee for Fair Play is determined to stop the prison from being built in Lillooet.

The committee of local citizens is worried about changes in the quality of life and the social impact of the prison and wants a referendum on the question.

And Vic Adolph, chief of the 11 bands in the Lillooet Indian tribal region, fears extra roads will be built on Indian lands. He says that if political pressure doesn't work, he is prepared to adopt measures such as road blockades to keep out government contractors.

Mass murder suspect well treated

NEW DELHI (AP) — The sister of a Canadian woman imprisoned for the last five months on suspicion of being linked with an Asian murder ring said Thursday she is satisfied with the way the case is being handled by Indian authorities.

Ending a two-week visit to New Delhi, Denise Leclerc, 25, of Quebec City, also said she believes her sister, Marie-Andree, 31, did not take part in a crime spree across Asia in which foreign tourists were drugged, robbed and in some cases murdered.

"I feel she is innocent," said Denise in an interview with The Associated Press. "When Marie-Andree tells me she has never killed or robbed, I trust her .... It is impossible for her to begin to kill and rob."

Marie-Andree and her travelling companion, French-Vietnamese Paul Gauthier, were arrested here July 9 after a French tour group was drugged and robbed at a Delhi hotel.

Levesque hints at new test of who should own Labrador

FERMONT, Que. (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Thursday Quebec regards the 1927 decision which defined its current border with Labrador as "unfair" and said he hopes the case will eventually be heard by an impartial court.

The premier emphasized the boundary dispute was not the purpose of his visit to the area, about 500 miles northeast of Quebec City.

The one-day visit, his first official trip outside Montreal and Quebec City since he became premier, includes a speech to a regional convention of the United Steelworkers of America.

"We think it was an unfair decision," Levesque said of the 1927 judgment by the British Privy Council which gave Newfoundland jurisdiction over the current borders of Labrador.

"We would like eventually to get our arguments assessed by an impartial court," he told a Labrador radio reporter.

Accused rapist shares docket with husband

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police say a judge may need the wisdom of Solomon when he presides at a joint hearing next week for a man charged with rape and the victim's husband, charged with kidnapping the alleged rapist.

"In 20 years, I've never seen a case like this one," police Sgt. Daniel Hill said.

"We're hoping the judge, who may have to be like King Solomon, will be able to straighten this out."

The husband, Earl Patterson, 33, was released on $2,500 bail after being charged with kidnapping, felonious restraint, aggravated and simple assault, terroristic threatening and possession of offensive weapons.

Carl Butler, 34, was held in lieu of $5,000 bail on charges of rape, robbery, theft, asaault and indecent assault.

The men will appear together next Wednesday before Common Pleas Judge Thomas Shiomos.

Patterson's wife, Maxine, 35, was robbed and raped in her driveway last January. She reported the attack to police, but they were unable to solve the case.

In October, Mrs. Patterson told her husband she saw the rapist getting off a bus in the neighborhood, and the couple began cruising the streets by car looking for him. About a week ago, Patterson bought handcuffs and a bludgeon, police said.

Patterson said his wife spotted Butler on Monday, repairing a driveway drain behind his home.

Patterson, a social worker, said he crept up behind Butler and made what he considered a citizen's arrest. But instead of taking Butler to a police station, he took him to the Patterson home and "interrogated" him for 2½ hours in the basement until he extracted a confession, police said.

By the time Patterson brought Butler to the police station, handcuffed and ready for booking, police and FBI agents had launched a search for Butler, whose wife had reported seeing him led away.

Scandal charges ruled out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department has closed its investigation of the Capitol Hill sex scandal and decided not to prosecute former representative Wayne Hays or anyone else involved, officials said Wednesday.

A department source said department lawyers concluded that they did not have enough evidence to support criminal charges against Hays, the once-powerful chairman of the House of Representatives administration committee who was forced to resign because of the scandal.

Elizabeth Ray told prosecutors and the public that Hays kept her on his committee payroll as his mistress. She said she did not work and that she could not even type.

She has since used the notoriety to promote her book about the affair.

"Her story is awfully shaky," said the department source. "She's just not a very good witness for the purpose of criminal prosecution."

Lisbon dry after blast

LISBON (UPI) — A saboteur's bomb blew a hole in Lisbon's main aqueduct Thursday, cutting the capital's water supply to a trickle. The water department said the blast cut off the capital from at least 90 per cent of its water supply, and urged the public to restrict water usage to the absolute minimum until service is restored, at least a day away. Housewives crowded into stores selling bottled mineral water, factories closed and restaurants ran out of dishes.

Coroner adjourns inquest

The inquest into the death of a 21-year-old whose body was found on a downtown Victoria rooftop has been adjourned until Jan. 19.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre began the inquest Tuesday in the death of Calvin John Marshall, who was a resident of Port Alberni until Dec. 1, when his body was discovered on the roof of 538 Yates Street with his hands tied behind his back.

An autopsy showed Marshall died of a fractured neck and Victoria city detectives are still investigating the case.

A total of 10 witnesses were called Tuesday and Armand Petronio acted as crown counsel during the opening session of the inquest at the law courts building.

The inquest is to continue Jan. 19, starting at 7:30 p.m. at the law courts building, unless criminal charges have been laid before that date.

New aldermen Ryan, Carson agree on democracy

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Talking to Frank Carson and Larry Ryan is an experience in democracy.

The two men, who will take their seats on Victoria city council in a few weeks, are worlds apart, but you get the feeling that if you scratch deep enough you will come up with a lot of similarities.

BOTH ARE card-carrying political party members. Ryan is a dedicated labor movement supporter and member of the NDP; Carson is a model free enterpriser and belongs to the Social Credit party.

Carson, 48, was born in Los Angeles while his parents were there on vacation. He left high school at 16 and worked on the Alaska Highway.

In 1947, he bought an earth-moving tractor and made his debut on the free enterprise scene by working his "cat" in the Alberta oil fields.

Carson:

"The reason I believe in private enterprise stems from the strong belief that a man should look after himself, his family and his community."

He moved to Vancouver in 1951 and worked at an assortment of jobs, piling lumber, digging ditches and driving a soft-drink truck.

HE TRIED university, but "didn't like it very much," and joined the Ford Motor Company as a clerk. He stayed with the company until 1961 when he moved to Victoria to open a car dealership.

Ryan, 57, was born in southern Ireland. He came to Canada in 1947 and worked on the General Motors assembly lines in Oshawa.

He came to Victoria in 1957 and started working for the Victoria Labor Council. In 1967, Ryan became the council's secretary.

The two men sat in the Colonist newsroom earlier this week to be interviewed about their goals as members of city council.

Will they engage in ideological warfare? Will they forget their philosophical differences and work as a team for the common good?

They probably revealed more than all the words could do about their character when they responded rather vehemently to a request to pose for photographs.

HOW ABOUT one shot shaking hands and another shaking fists at each other?

Both refused without hesitation. Dishonest, dramatic, no way, were some of the more kind remarks. Hams they are not. What's more, they both serve on the Victoria General Hospital Board, and they say they do get along.

Asked about ideological commitment, Carson said his belief in free enterprise stemmed from a credo that a man should first look after himself, his family and community before asking the community to look after him.

Ryan said he was motivated by his background and the humanistic traditions of the labor movement.

Both said they would approach their jobs on city council without compromising their principles.

In fact, Ryan said he would fight to make those principles a fact of life on council.

"You wouldn't do that, you're too dignified," said Carson, laughing.

The art of politics is to present your point of view convincingly without inflicting permanent wounds on your opponent, he said.

Carson agreed with that.

At one point of the discussion, Carson said that since there were no party politics involved all aldermen essentially worked together.

Ryan didn't quite see it that way. There was a danger in that attitude, he said, that one's convictions might be watered down or even drowned.

"On a municipal council, every alderman is a minority government," he said.

That prompted Carson to speak up:

"I KNOW YOU; you will fight for your beliefs. And I think our duty is to fight as long as there is a substance over which to fight," he said.

Carson added aldermen must have the courage to state their convictions regardless of the opinions of the majority.

Ryan interjected that this was probably the most difficult part since no alderman could lambaste an opponent under the protective mantle of party politics where opposition was expected.

Asked whether they have higher political ambitions, Ryan said: "I can answer that in two words — definitely not."

Carson said not at the moment, but he couldn't rule out that possibility. Carson ran as a Social Credit candidate in Oak Bay in the last provincial election and was defeated by Tory Scott Wallace.

Both men believe there will be decisions to face in which their political and philosophical convictions will play a part.

RYAN SAID inadequacies in the distribution of wealth and privilege could be found in every level of government and walk of life.

Carson said he believed that no decision by elected officials should infringe on the rights of others.

You come away from the interview convinced that intelligent debate is something both men will welcome. But you also know that neither is given to backstabbing or vicious fighting.

If both men stick to their principles and are guided by them, Victorians will be the real winners in last month's municipal election.

Ryan:

"Coming from my background representing the humanistic tradition in the labor movement, I believe politics in B.C. always involves two points of view."

Let's see reports on WCB—labor men

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Organized labor, which has been raising serious doubts about the operations of the Workers' Compensation Board, wasn't happy Thursday to find itself without copies of the two special reports made public by the provincial government.

As a result, labor leaders were treating news reports as unofficial and reserving comment until they have a chance to study the actual reports.

"I'm glad the reports are being released, but I'm disappointed we didn't get a copy," said Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America.

"It is certainly important that we know what the recommendations are and I hope the trade-labor movement has an opportunity to respond to them before any action is taken on them."

Labor Minister Allan Williams had copies distributed to the press and opposition politicians Thursday. The word was that the labor movement would receive copies today.

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Len Guy said the matter was so important he wouldn't consider commenting until he had read the reports and discussed them with the federation's compensation and safety committee.

It was the same committee that submitted an annual report at the recent federation convention condemning both the government and employers for the troubles of the WCB.

"Employers in B.C. took the election of the Social Credit government as a signal to dismantle and emasculate the Workers' Compensation Board, and to reduce the amount of benefits paid out to injured workers," the federation committee said in its report.

The committee also said it believed the two reports were called for by the government as a means of discrediting the former NDP government. It was wary of the role of P. S. Ross and Partners, the firm responsible for one of Thursday's reports, and refused to make any submissions to the Ross inquiry.

The question of compensation came under serious debate at the convention as delegates spoke of what they saw as injustices.

It may be that labor and the feared Ross company will find some common ground. The Ross report advises the province to strip the WCB chairman of some of his powers, something the IWA's Munro says has been suggested by labor.

Munro's union, largest in the province, has added its own stinging report on the WCB to that produced by the federation.

It was important that all WCB commissioners, and not just the chairman, have a say in what is happening, Munro said.

"We want to know if the three commisssioners will have a role to play in life and not just spend their time running around the country cutting ribbons."

Ultimatum issued on taxes

Anyone owing the city of Victoria more than $3,000 in property taxes had better pay up or face legal action after Dec. 31.

Victoria city council gave orders Thursday to city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to sue anyone whose property tax bill exceeds $3,000 on Dec. 31.

Last year, de Villiers got similar orders and collected every cent owing.

About $960,000 in property taxes are still outstanding and Mayor Michael Young has said that two-thirds of the amount is owed by 37 firms and individuals, mostly developers.

Plea for even tighter Canada-first job rule

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

The chairman of the Victoria chapter of the Committee for an Independent Canada blasted the University of Victoria and Canadian universities in general Thursday, accusing them of perpetuating an "abysmal ignorance of Canada" through indiscriminate hiring policies.

Burke Cahill said UVic has not adopted a Canadian-first hiring policy as reported because the board of governors has the "ultimate say in the matter."

He said the board was meeting Dec. 20 to adopt or reject such a policy.

The Committee for an Independent Canada is sending the board a telegram urging the governors to tighten their definition of a Canadian.

Under new policy dealing with UVic's selection procedures, a Canadian is defined as a Canadian citizen, a landed immigrant in Canada at the time the application is made, or one who has had extensive training or experience in Canada.

Cahill said the telegram would propose that landed immigrants should have a good knowledge of Canada if they are going to be included in a Canadian-first policy.

"Providing jobs for Canadians is subsidiary. We want to provide Canadian content at the university level," Cahill said.

He said 92 per cent of professors in Britain were British, 84 per cent of professors in America were American, while 75 per cent of professors in Canada were "non-Canadian."

"An American can come to the border and be assured of a job at UVic. He just steps across the border and gets his passport stamped landed immigrant," he said.

Faculty representative on the board of governors, I. D. Pal, said Thursday he was puzzled by Cahill's reference that the faculty association was dominated by non-Canadians. Pal said 70 per cent of faculty association members were Canadians.

Referring to Pal's statement, Cahill retorted: "He's from Pakistan himself. He's from Pakistan and that's wonderful. It depends on what you call a Canadian.

"Canadians would be the last persons in the world to discriminate. It's not a question of discrimination. It's a question of providing knowledge of Canada to Canadians," Cahill said.

Old pub still on block

The inn serves beer, liquor, wine and small dinners. The business is "definitely thriving," a spokesman said Thursday.

He said the inn was being sold primarily because three of the partners plan to start two other businesses. There were also "family reasons," he said.

The spokesman said the inn has had several purchase offers within the last month.

Simpson originally bought the site for less than 84 pounds sterling.

The inn has been on the market for three months.

Activity centre

City approves Blanshard deal

Humanistic motivations outweighed financial considerations Thursday when Victoria city council approved the purchase of a building on Kings Road to be used as an activity centre for children living in or near Blanshard Court.

Ald. Ronald McKenzie was the only one voting against the proposal. He wanted assurances that other levels of government would help finance the purchase and that the city wouldn't be saddled with the maintenance costs.

But Ald. Murray Glazier told council the purchase should be approved now and details sorted out later.

The building belongs to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded and is on Kings Road, just east of Blanshard.

The purchase price is $100,000. The federal government's Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has already agreed to pay $65,000. The remainder will be paid by the city and the provincial government, the city hopes.

The activity centre will serve as a place for children to play games and engage in crafts.

Proposal for all regional lakes

'Ban power boats'

Power boats may be banned from Elk-Beaver Lakes and all other regional park lakes by next summer if the Capital Region Board acts on a parks committee recommendation.

The other recommendation would ban all commercial ventures from regional parks with the exception of the present Kiwanis concession in Elk-Beaver Lake park.

Executive director Dennis Young told a local planning and zoning committee Thursday the parks committee had felt power boating was totally incompatible with all other recreational uses of fresh water lakes.

Regional park lakes, he said, were being used intensively for other water sports and that use is on the increase.

"There are vast areas of salt water for people who want to water ski or speed about in power boats," he said.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said: "The lakes are small and there just isn't room for power boats roaring around."

The open space committee report and recommendations will go back to the parks committee before formal recommendations go before the full board.

Fleming

Promoted —to Kelowna

He arrived in Oak Bay last March.

"This is quite a promotion," he said Thursday. "Oak Bay has a population of 20,000 while Kelowna has a population of 55,000."

He had some regrets at leaving Oak Bay, but was looking forward to a challenging new job.

"Kelowna expanded just a couple of years ago when it became an amalgamated city, from 20,000 to 55,000, and there are some problems to work on there."

127-unit hotel under way soon

Construction will begin in January on a scaled-down hotel at Laurel Point that will cost $7 million and have 127 rooms.

Council earlier this year gave Canadian Freehold Properties, an affiliate of Canadian Industries Ltd., a land-use contract for a scaled-down version of its original plan for the project on the former Bapco Paint site.

The Harbour Inn will be built and owned by Canadian Freehold Properties and managed under long-term contract by Delta Hotels Ltd., as Delta's seventh hotel in Canada and fifth in B.C.

Delta Hotels president William Pattison said the hotel rooms will all have water views, and there will be an indoor-outdoor swimming pool and tennis courts. Underground parking for 150 cars has been provided beneath the adjacent Laurel Point condominium development. The hotel will also have meeting and banquet facilities for groups of up to 200 and a specialty restaurant.

The hotel is expected to open in the spring of 1978.

Plans for the site were announced by CIL as early as December, 1972. After lengthy debate this year council allowed a reduction in the hotel rooms from 199 to 127 and the height was scaled down from eight to four storeys.

Pattison said the changes were made solely for economic reasons.

Sooke Road mishap kills Colwood man

A Colwood man, Hilton Frederick Vasey, 66, of 616 Kelly Road, died Thursday night after being struck by a car on Sooke Road.

Police said the vehicle, travelling west, was driven by Alexander Frederick Robert Schneider, 36, of 3325 Fulton Road in Colwood.

They said Vasey was wearing dark clothing at the time of the mishap.

Police were still investigating.

City backs apartments on Gorge Road sites

Plans for two apartment projects on Gorge Road that will provide a total of 208 rental suites were approved Thursday by Victoria city council.

The two projects will be built at 225 and 241 Gorge Road, now occupied by the Prince Charles and Charles Dickens motels.

Part of the agreement between the city and the developer for both projects, E. J. Butler Ltd. and Citation Estates Ltd., provides for an easement for a future walkway along the waterfront.

After a public hearing at which only two persons spoke against the plans, city council approved a land-use contract between the city and the developer.

The two opponents were Joe Richards and Ann Tarasoff, both unsuccessful candidates for aldermanic seats on city council in last month's civic election.

Richards opposed only the development on the site now occupied by the Prince Charles motel. He said the motel was relatively new and could serve Victoria's tourist industry for many years to come.

Demolition of the motel, Richards said, would result in a loss of permanent jobs. Construction of the apartment building, he added, would provide only temporary jobs.

Mrs. Tarasoff objected to both projects on grounds that neither would be subject to rent controls.

The existing motels, she said, had been accommodating welfare recipients referred to them by the human resources department.

Victoria lawyer and former alderman Ian Stewart spoke on the developer's behalf.

Stewart told the public hearing that bulding density of the apartment projects was substantially lower than that allowed under the property's old motel zoning.

After the public hearing, city council approved both land-use contracts without debate.

Children's clothes to jump most, says retailer

TORONTO (CP) — Children's wear may be the first to increase in price because of the federal government's new import quotas on clothing, says a leading retail business official.

Alisdair McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada, said in an interview "children's clothing is liable to be the first casuality," and low-income families will suffer the most.

Last week, the federal government rolled back clothing imports from all countries to 1975 levels in an effort to protect jobs in the domestic clothing and textile industry.

McKichan said overseas manufacturers, shut off by their most profitable goods to the quotas, would try to sell Canada, mainly men's and women's wear.

He said Canadian stores would have to buy children's clothing from a limited Canadian market and prices would be pushed up.

The retail council, which has 10,000 members across Canada, has suggested that the federal government introduce incentives to promote the continued importation of children's clothing, he said.

McKichan estimated all clothing prices will increase 15 per cent in the next 12 months. Types of clothing traditionally imported but which now will be made in Canada probably will increase 20 to 40 per cent at the retail level, he said.

He said the council is not opposed to the need for some protection for the Canadian textile industry, but it is concerned that the quotas were applied in a blanket fashion with no provisions for exemptions.

Expensive fashions should be exempted because the quotas will pose a serious problem to small, exclusive boutiques that cannot obtain from Canadian manufacturers the type of fashion they sell he said.

New try for ferry subsidy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Any agreement Ottawa accedes to in order to continue a shipping service to the north coast of B.C. should also cover B.C. Ferries, Transportation Minister Jack Davis said here.

B.C. has been trying for years to obtain an operating subsidy for its fleet serving Vancouver Island, the Sunshine Coast, northwest of here, and the Prince Rupert-Kelsey Bay service.

B.C. has argued that its ferry fleet is part of the Trans-Canada Highway system and has pointed to subsidies granted to ferry services in eastern Canada.

Davis said the B.C. government is sympathetic to the problems of communities along the central and northern coasts now that their transportation systems have been disrupted by the elimination of subsidies to a company which provided ferry and barge services.

However, the government cannot take over too much of the service without first negotiating a basic subsidy agreement with the federal government for all ferries plying B.C. coastal waters, he said.

Once that agreement has been reached, B.C. can look at expanding its services to cover central and northern communities.

Davis also said B.C. is flexible in the terms it is seeking in the basic agreement. Ottawa might agree to provide capital costs for ferry construction or offer a formula under which it would pay a percentage of the ferry system operating costs.

Davis said the unsatisfactory service replacing that of Northland Navigation, which dropped its coastal shipping when its federal subsidy expired last month, could be improved once a basic agreement is reached between Victoria and Ottawa.

Meanwhile, the federal transport department has no plans for a substitute ferry service for 100 isolated communities on southern half of the B.C. coast, department spokesman Robert Potvin said.

"We believe that freight service should be handled by operators on an unsubsidized basis," Potvin said in a telephone interview from Ottawa. "We have no plans for any."

Coast Ferries Ltd., which has been operating the service for communities between Howe Sound and Rivers Inlet, has announced it will suspend operations to those ports Dec. 31.

W. A. New, president of Coast Ferries, said the lack of plans by the transport department was no surprise considering the little it understands about West Coast shipping problems.

New said as a condition of continuing the freight service, his firm has asked for a subsidy for three months each winter to cover the service's uneconomic period.

North Arm Transportation Ltd. has said it is prepared to take over the Coast Ferries ports without subsidy but not until February. The company will not be able to supply freight service to all 100 ports.

When confronted with this, Potvin said:

"Well I guess time will tell. The whole arrangement has growing problems and we are fairly satisfied that everything will be all right in the end."

'Payoffs warning issued'

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Thursday he made it clear to an agent in the sale of a nuclear reactor to South Korea that he would not be reimbursed for any improper payments.

Ross Campbell, appearing before the Commons public accounts committee inquiring into two foreign sales, repeated that he still had no evidence any bribes or payoffs were involved.

He added that "innuendo and insinuation" about the possibility of such payments is hurting the reputations of all the companies involved.

But later he said that when a contract with United Developments Inc. of Tel Aviv, the agent in the South Korean sale, was renegotiated last spring, he told the agent "we could not pay for any improper payments."

Asked after the committee meeting why he thought such action had been taken, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said that in a number of instances in recent years in other countries use of bribes had been proven.

"Wouldn't you have done the same thing?" he said, referring to Campbell's statement.

Still no funds to open schools

GROVEPORT, Ohio (AP) — Supt. Phillip Williams still has 12 empty schools and 6,900 pupils are still on vacation after voters again defeated an attempt to raise property taxes.

The schools closed after a proposed $11.50 increase was turned down Nov. 2. They cannot open until Jan. 3, when 1977 funds become available.

Drivers beware, roadblocks out

Saanich police will have a moving roadblock in operation this weekend.

Sgt. David MacGregor said Thursday the seven-man squad will be out Saturday night checking cars and drivers.

The squad was in operation Tuesday and checked 123 vehicles on blocks at Gorge and Orillia, McKenzie and Gordon Head and Shelbourne and Poplar, making three arrests for impaired driving.

In addition, five tickets were issued for other violations, such as invalid safety-inspection stickers, and 29 warning tickets were issued.

Police roadblocks are expected to increase as Christmas draws closer and the number of drinking drivers increases.

Victoria-Vancouver excursion

PWA wants fare cut

Pacific Western Airlines, in what its district manager said was response to the needs of the area, is attempting to offer a special three-day excursion fare between Victoria and Vancouver and is improving its schedule.

The new fare, is given Canadian Transport Commission approval, would cut about $16 off the present regular return fare. The new price, good for three calendar days, would be $35 compared with the present $51.84, both prices including transportation tax.

Manager Eric Carswell said it may not be possible to have the approval before Jan. 16 when the new schedule comes into effect and he said he didn't know whether other airlines would intrevene on the application.

PWA said last month that it was restoring its late flight 10:35 p.m. to Victoria from Vancouver. Carswell supplied the details Thursday and said the return of the flight was a direct response to local protests. Under the present schedule, which the line shares with Air Canada, the last flight to Victoria leaves Vancouver at 9:35 p.m.

When the late flight is restored, PWA will bring over a 115-passenger Boeing 737 instead of the 50-passenger Convair formerly used on that flight. Air Canada recently went to a larger Boeing 727 on its last flight.

Carswell said in an interview that PWA's new regional organization was proving more responsive to various community needs.

He said that under the previous setup, the operations department of the airline decided what plane would fly where and when. Now marketing departments and station managers get together and work out the plans, and the operations department then works these into the planes and staff available.

The new schedule, for instance, recognized that some people might like an early flight to Seattle to connect with Pan Am's 747, to Honolulu.

Other improvements include service that flies to Vancouver and allows passengers same-plane service to points such as Edmonton, Calgary, Kelowna, Kamloops and Cranbrook. And the same works in reverse. Carswell said a person will be able to leave Kelowna at 9:15 p.m. and be back in Victoria at 10:55.

Millionaire in hiding

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Robert C. Shatford of Ottawa is an instant millionaire and because of his luck with Loto Canada he had to go underground to avoid publicity.

A medical adviser for the Canadian Pension Commission, Shatford has had his telephone number changed.

Gus Cousineau, head of Loto Canada, had hoped to present the $1,000,000 cheque to Shatford at Loto Canada headquarters on Wednesday when the doctor's lawyer called to say that his client would not appear.

The lawyer arrived later to collect the cheque.

Grocery savings illusory

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal anti-inflation board's regional Vancouver office said Thursday the thousands travelling 50 miles to Bellingham from the Vancouver area to shop are likely not saving much.

Dave Chapman, the AIB's regional director, said a survey shows Canadians may save some undetermined amount if they are buying in bulk or if they have studied the prices of certain items in advance.

But he said people are simply travelling south to purchase a weekly food basket, "they should be more cautious. It's a big gamble if they're saving anything."

Chapman said he triggered the AIB study of the U.S. prices because of the widespread criticism that B.C. wages are responsible for higher prices.

The AIB staff conducted a survey of 63 food items in Bellingham. It found that 24 items were more expensive than in Vancouver — and three were the same price after adding the Washington state sales tax of 5.4 per cent.

Price rollbacks ordered

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board released the names of 73 companies Thursday that it said have agreed to freeze or reduce prices to comply with guidelines for acceptable prices and profits.

The companies had earned a total of $6.6 million in excess revenues and have filed compliance plans with the board showing how they will return this money to their customers.

Names of the companies were announced at a press conference in Toronto.

The anti-inflation board refuses to equate the term excess revenues with excess profits. But it says a company earns excess revenues only if it exceeds allowable profit margins under the anti-inflation program.

Of the 73 companies whose names were reported Thursday, 22 had excess revenues of $10,000 or less for a total of $109,000. The remainder had excess revenues of more than $10,000, but only 26 of these agreed to let the anti-inflation board publish the amounts of the excess they earned. The other 25 cited reasons of confidentiality for refusing to reveal the amounts of excess revenues they earned.

The board said the 73 companies have priced most of their business in accordance with the guidelines. The $6.6 million of excess revenues compared with $600 million of total revenues in those parts of the companies' business were they had excess revenue. Their overall revenues from all business for the same period was $1.7 billion, the board says.

Among companies with excess revenues of $10,000 or less were:

Southam Printing Ltd., Toronto ($135,000); Spar Aerospace Products Ltd., Toronto ($23,000); St. Mary's Cement Ltd., Toronto ($51,000).

The total of these companies, excess revenues was $1,873,483.

The following companies had excess revenues of $10,000 or more each but would not allow the board to publish the individual amounts:

Federal official:

Woodpulp bread below standard

OTTAWA (CP) — Bread containing purified wood pulp fibre does not meet the federal bread standard and won't be allowed in the country, says Dr. Alexander Morrison, an assistant deputy-minister of the federal health department.

Morrison said Thursday the manufacturer would have to prove wood pulp fibre doesn't cause any adverse health effects before the bread standard would be amended to allow the bread on the Canadian market.

Bread containing the wood pulp fibre has been sold for the last six months in the United States under the name Fresh Horizons. It has fewer calories and a higher fibre content.

He said the federal health protection branch was approached informally "some time ago" by a Toronto-based firm interested in introducing the bread to Canada.

Morrison said he informed the firm, which he would not name, of the research the health department would require and hasn't heard from them since.

New Zealand mood hardens over sport ties

Wisdom of link with South Africa increasingly questioned

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand, still smarting from having been the target of black Africa's boycott at the Montreal Olympics, is increasingly questioning the wisdom of continuing sports ties with South Africa.

Citizens of this sport-loving nation are beginning to face up to the prospect that they may wreck the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton unless they sever sporting ties with South Africa.

The country is still gripped by bitter controversy, which has lasted for more than a decade, over sporting contacts with South Africa which have angered black Africans and other opponents of the republic's policy of apartheid.

Political observers say the mood in New Zealand is hardening against further contact with South Africa at any level, and that the government of Prime Minister Robert Muldoon is showing cautious but significant signs of shifting its formerly rigid attitudes on South African sports links.

The government is emphasizing its total abhorrence of apartheid and racially-segregated sports, and drawing the attention of sporting bodies and administrators to United Nations resolutions calling for the cutting of all sports contacts with South Africa.

When the New Zealand Rugby Union announced last week that it would not accept an invitation for a Maori team to tour South Africa next year, because of a heavy domestic programme, the minister for foreign affairs, Brian Talboys, welcomed the move which he said might reflect the changing attitudes.

He added that on a recent visit to the Middle East and East Africa, he had encountered a depth of feeling among Africans against apartheid.

While the New Zealand government would leave the final decision on sporting contacts with South Africa to the sports bodies, he hoped they would seek government advice before planning sporting exchanges.

Muldoon denied in an interview that his National Party government had changed its policy which remained "one of non-interference in sport." But he conceded they had made a number of firm statements about the issue in recent months.

"We have been stating what was said so many times before, but stating it in the context of the All Blacks rugby tour of South Africa earlier this year," he said.

The game of rugby — New Zealand's national obsession — remains at the heart of the internatonal storm which burst into full fury at Montreal. Most black African nations ordered their athletes to withdraw from the Games when the International Olympic Committee refused to ban the New Zealanders whose All Blacks were then on tour in South Africa.

Sporting contact with South Africa was a burning issue in the 1975 general election and many political experts consider that Muldoon's steamroller win over the then Labor government headed by Wallace Rowling was partly, if not largely, due to his pledge that a National Party government would not hinder any teams going to South Africa.

In New Zealanders' eyes, the flash point which led to black Africa's total boycott of New Zealand athletes was the visit here well before the Olympics of Abraham Ordia, Nigerian chairman of the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa.

Ordia sought to meet Muldoon or one of his ministers to discuss the All Blacks tour, but the prime minister flatly refused to have any contact with the African official, and said that Ordia could "stew in his own juice."

Public opinion appeared then to be overwhelmingly in favor of the tour going on, but there was a big swing of the pendulum after the defeat of the New Zealanders in the rugby test series.

"The tour left an unpleasant taste in our mouths," one sports administrator said, adding that many New Zealanders had been angered by South Africa's handling of the Soweto rioting while the All Blacks were on tour, by what he claimed was unnecessary dirty play by South African rugby players and the partiality of South African referees during the test series.

In his interview, Muldoon said the only change in his government's stand was that Talboys had said recently that if any sports body wanted to approach him, he would set out for them the United Nations resolutions on apartheid and apartheid in sport.

Talboys had stated further, he noted, that if New Zealand sports organizations had contact with South Africa it might further exacerbate the international situation, but that they would have to make their own decisions.

The prime minister, along with Rowling and leading sports administrators, all agree that the Commonwealth Games are in jeopardy because of the African boycott of New Zealand athletes.

"I'm coming to the conclusion that some of the black African nations are going to prevent their sportsmen going to Edmonton in order to keep attention on apartheid in South Africa," said Muldoon.

"I think the New Zealand decision is very largely irrelevant to that determination. We are certainly not changing our policy."

He reacted strongly to suggestions voiced by some sports officials that New Zealand should withdraw voluntarily in order to save the Commonwealth Games.

"I don't know who suggested that, but they certainly don't know the New Zealand government. That's just fantasy."

He did not agree it would throw the moral responsibility for the breakdown of the Commonwealth Games on to black Africa.

"I think what would happen then would be that they would look around for someone else they didn't like to make the same point," he said, adding that they might turn against Britain.

"Some of their statements have been totally irrational," Muldoon said. "I am speaking particularly of the Supreme Council of African Sport rather than the governments.

"By and large, our experience has been that when you get close to them (governments) and talk sense, they moderate their attitude," the New Zealand prime minister said.

Volleyball visitors display winning form

Shigemi Murata of Senshu, the No. 2 ranked high-school girls volleyball club in Japan leaps high to spike the ball during exhibition action Thursday afternoon at S. J. Willis School while Janet Hough of the Victoria Y makes vain attempt to block the shot. Others shown include Kayomi Tsuzinaka (3) of Senshu and an unidentified teammate and Linda Chiu (11) of Victoria. The visitors posted a 3-1 win in the match on scores of 15-1, 10-15, 15-1, 15-5. More than 400 spectators watched the match with half of them participating in a pre-match volleyball clinic.

Fergy's erratic start leaves him off pace

Cec Ferguson shot par golf over the last 11 holes Thurs day but more than half the field playing in the Profes sional Golfers Association qualifying tournament are ahead of him after the first round of an 108-hole test.

The Victoria pro, playing what is considered the toughest of the three courses being used, went seven over par on the first seven holes. He settled down there, but couldn't get any strokes back and finished with a seven over par 77.

Ferguson is one of 375 golfers seeking to qualify for a card which will permit them to play on the regular PGA tour this year. It hasn't been determined as yet how many cards will be at stake in the current qualifying tournament, but it could be as few as 10.

The field is playing over three par 70 courses near Brownsville, Texas — Angel, the course Ferguson played Thursday, and El Diablo and Valley International, which is rated the easiest. All golfers will play one round on each course, and then the field will be cut to around 110. The last three rounds will be played on the El Diablo layout, and there will be further cuts in succeeding rounds.

His early troubles left Ferguson in a position which would make another slip disastrous. He is 10 strokes behind the leader, Don Pooley of Riverside, Calif., and nine strokes behind 10 others tied at 68. More important at the moment is that 150 scores of 75 or better were turned in and it may take par golf in the next two rounds to make the first cut.

Pooley turned in a no-bogey round, carding three pars to beat par by as many strokes with a 33-34 log. Among those who shot 68 was Australian Graham Marsh, who had a pair of 34s.

Eastern Pat O'Donnell led the Canadian contingent with a 69, and then came Ontario's Kelly Roberts at 72. Dave Barr of Kelowna had a 75 and Bob Beauchemin of Victoria couldn't get his game together and had to settle for an 82.

Anderson added to tourney club

CALGARY — The Western Canada Hockey League's team for the international major junior tournament scheduled for later this month was completed Thursday with the addition of eight players.

Among the latest selections was forward Gregg Anderson of Victoria Cougars who joins teammates Curt Fraser and Murray Bannerman on the roster.

Others named by coach Ernie McLean were defenceman Brad McCrimmon of Brandon Wheat Kings and Miles Zahako of New Westminster Bruins; centres Tom Roulston of Winnipeg Monarchs, Brent Peterson of Portland Winter Hawks and Doug Lecuyer of Calgary Centennials; rightwingers Tony Currie of Portland and Stan Smyl of New Westminster.

The 29 Players which have been named will go to the team's training camp in Calgary Dec. 22 but McLean will have to drop at least four players by Dec. 25.

A final decision on the roster size will be made by the teams involved in the tournament but it has already been decided that each team will only be allowed to dress 20 players for each game.

The tournament for the Labatt Cup, which opens Dec. 26, involves the WCHL all-star team and teams from Ontario, Quebec and the Soviet Union. Games will be played in Elmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge.

NEXT GAMES — Tonight: Minnesota at Atlanta; Washington at Cleveland.

Philadelphia was forced to settle for a 3-3 tie with Atlanta Wednesday night before finally breaking the Flyers' jinx on Boston ice with a 4-2 victory Thursday night.

The 1974 and 1975 National Hockey League champions aren't yet atop the Patrick Division, but they are moving in that direction with a nine-game unbeaten streak.

It was extended to nine Thursday with a sixth victory, the Flyers spotting Boston Bruins the first goal and then coming on to register a 3-1 decision which ended a long barren streak on Boston ice in schedule play.

Flyers have won in Boston during Stanley Cup play, but Thursday's was their first victory there in schedule play since their first-ever Boston appearance. That came on Nov. 12, 1967, and since then the Flyers have lost 18 and tied four games in Beantown.

Gary Dornhoefer played a big part in the Thursday win, setting up Rick MacLeish for the tying goal and then shooting the winning gooal later in the first period.

Flyers had only 16 shots on goal in what was a close-checking game, but they held the Bruins to 18. The clinching goal came 20 seconds from time without the puck entering the net. It was credited to Bobby Clarke, who took a wide shot at the unguarded goal and received automatic credit when Bobby Schmautz threw his stick at the puck.

Victory regained a second-place tie, and moved the Flyers within three points of the leading New York Islanders.

In Thursday's other game, Western Canada Hockey League graduates scored the goals which brought Pittsburgh Penguins a 2-1 verdict over Buffalo Sabres.

Penguins were held to 18 shots on goal, but Nanaimo's Wayne Bianchin scored in the first period, rookie Blair Chapman broke a 1-1 tie in the second period, and Denis Herron, who made 29 stops, took it from there.

Brentwood sides win

Teams from Brentwood College in Mill Bay have won three of four matches this week in Britain.

The Brentwood I side, which fought to a 24-24 tie with Radley in its tour opener last weekend, dropped a 17-12 decision to Eastborne (Sussex) in its second game but bounced back Thursday with an 18-6 win over Durham.

The Brentwood II team topped Eastbourne 10-7 and romped to a 35-0 win over Durham.

The Island sides play in Blackpool and Croydon before returning to Canada in time for Christmas.

Soccer Canada

Tampering charges involve city player

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps have named 16 players who were to leave today for Haiti to begin training for Soccer Canada's game Dec. 22 against the United States in the World Cup preliminary round.

Included on the roster were three players — Gary Ayre, Wes McLeod and Victoria's Bob Bolitho — who were reported to be negotiating with the new Honolulu franchise in the North American Soccer League.

General-manager John Best and coach Eckhard Krautzun of the Whitecaps, also members of the NASL, denounced the Honolulu situation Thursday and said it was a violation of NASL rules which stop member teams from approaching players involved in World Cup playoffs.

"There seems to be no question that this is tampering and in contravention of league rules," said Krautzun.

Two new additions were named to the Soccer Canada team, both from NASL clubs. Ike MacKay of Victoria played for Portland and Victor Kodelja for San Antonio (now Honolulu) in 1976.

Krautzun said that negotiations were continuing for school teacher Gary Thompson as a possible late addition. He also said that John McGrame and Ken Whitehead of Simon Fraser University would remain on standby in Vancouver.

Team manager John McMahon said in a telephone interview from Toronto that a number of warmup games in Port-Au-Prince had been arranged, although dates and opponents for Soccer Canada were not available.

Winner of the Canada-U.S. game will advance along with Mexico to the next round of World Cup playoffs.

The three countries finished a double-round-robin series tied last month and Mexico took one of the two berths because of a superior goal average.

Braves snap tie

Saanich Braves broke a tie for the lead Thursday night by trouncing Oak Bay Trios, 10-3, in one of two South Vancouver Island Junior B Hockey League games.

In the other, played at Memorial Arena, Ray's Red Wings of Victoria blew a three-goal lead and settled for a 6-6 tie with Lake Cowichan Bairds.

Braves, two points ahead of Fuller Lake, were again led by Ron Jobson and Ed Beauchemin.

Jobson, getting five points for the second time in a week, is again five points ahead in the individual point race. He had three goals and two assists in breaking away from Fuller Lake's Terry Ellison.

Beauchemin, who leads the league in goals, made his 29th, 30th and 31st scoring shots.

Rob Coldwell (2), Bill Adkin and Brent Patterson got the other goals for the Braves. Stan Alstad, Dave Murrell and Mike Paget scored for the Trios.

In Memorial Arena, the Wings lost a three-goal lead in the last 13 minutes. Rob Frost started the Lake Cowichan rally at 7:16, Ron Mayea got the second of his two goals at 12:10 and Craig Baird tied it with a power-play goal at 17:56.

Braves yield five players to obtain Texas slugger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Atlanta Braves packaged five players and an undisclosed amount of cash Thursday to acquire slugger Jeff Burroughs from Texas Rangers in the biggest trade yet completed at baseball's winter meeting. (Other stories on page 21.)

Jeff Burroughs
. . . upset by trade

Meanwhile, the on-again, off-again George Scott deal was on again with the announcement that the veteran first baseman had agreed to terms with Boston Red Sox, despite recommendations from his agent to turn down the Sox' offer.

The Braves came here determined to pry Burroughs away from Texas, and did it with a fistful of players. Moving to the Rangers were outfielders Ken Henderson and Dave May and pitchers Carl Morton, Roger Moret and Adrian Devine.

Burroughs was the American League's most valuable player in 1974 when he batted .301 with 25 home runs and a league-leading 118 runs batted in. But his average has slipped badly the last two seasons, dipping to .226 in 1975 and .237 this year. His power supply has remained consistent, however with 29 homers and 94 RBIs in 1975 and 18 homers and 86 RBIs in 1976.

"They are getting a premium player," said Texas manager Frank Lucchesi of Burroughs. "That park could turn him around."

Atlanta's Stadium often has been called the launching pad because of its 330-foot foul lines result in a lot of home runs.

"I believe we strengthened ourselves in several ways," said Eddie Robinson, executive vice-president of the Rangers, who shifted to Texas from a front office job with Atlanta last year. "We now have a better balanced club."

"Eddie told me it was a good deal, so it must be," said Ted Turner, the flamboyant owner of the Braves.

Turner said he had talked to Burroughs and that the slugger who had 102 homers in four full AL seasons was upset about the deal.

"It's the first time he's been traded," said Turner.

"He won't be so upset when he sees that ball park," noted long-time baseball trader Frank Lane. "He might hit 50 home runs there."

In another Thursday deal, New York Mets sent outfielder Leon Brown and first-baseman Brock Pemberton to St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for outfielder-first baseman Ed Kurpiel.

All three players were assigned to the Mets' and Cardinals' Triple A farm clubs at Tidewater of the International League and New Orleans of the American Association.

Brown and Pemberton both were dropped from the Mets' roster following the 1976 season and were available but not selected in Monday's draft of minor leaguers. Brown batted .214 in 63 games for the Mets this season. Pemberton hit .290 at Tidewater.

Kurpiel split the 1976 season at Tulsa, where he batted .280 in 29 games, and Salt Lake City, where he hit .262 in 83 games.

Scottish pair golf leaders

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ernesto Perez Acosta of Mexico and Kuo Chie-Hsiung, a smooth veteran from Taiwan, matched three-under-par 69s and shared the lead Thursday after the first round of the World Cup international golf tournament.

United States Open champion Jerry Pate had the individual lead alone until he bogeyed the last two holes for a 70. Dave Stockton, the PGA national champion and the other member of the American team, scrambled to a 74 in his first competitive start in two months.

"We will improve," the disappointed Stockton said. "I think we'll get better every day. Neither one of us has played much in the last couple of months and it figured we'll get better."

Scotland's duo of big Brian Branes and Sam Torrance led the team competition at 143, one under par on the 7181-yard Mission Hills Country Club course.

The defending champion U.S. was next at 144 and New Zealand and Australia, at 145 were tied for fourth among the two-man teams from 48 countries.

In the individual competition, the veteran Barnes, Park Jung Ung of South Korea and Craig DeFoy of Wales were tied with Pate at 70, one stroke back of the leaders.

The only others to break par in the warm sunshine were Simon Owens of New Zealand, Japan's Takashi Murakami, Bob Shearer of Australia and Spain's young sensation, Severino Ballesteros, all at 71.

"If I can keep on putting like this I've got a good chance at winning," said Perez Acosta, 30, the native of Tijuana and now a club pro in Mexico City. He's easily the best player in his country, having won 13 Mexican tournaments in the last two years, including the Mexican Open — which drew a number of American touring pros — only last month.

He was the only man in the field who escaped without a bogey and missed only two greens.

Kuo, playing on his third World Cup team, led Taiwan to a second-place finish last year. The 36-year-old veteran led the Asian Order of Merit in 1974 and has scored numerous professional victories on the Asian circuit.

He too credited good putting for his high position. Kuo scored twice from 20 feet and dropped another birdie putt of about 30 feet.

Pate appeared in a commanding position and had not made a bogey until he dropped back on the last two holes. He missed the green on the 17th and hit his second shot in the water on the 18th.

McAdoo traded to Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks acquired high-scoring centre Bob McAdoo and reserve-centre Tom McMillen from Buffalo Braves on Thursday for centre John Gianelli and a reported $3 million.

The deal for the six-foot-10 McAdoo, the National Basketball Association's scoring leader the last three seasons, climaxed several days of on-again, off-again announcements that had the four-year veteran from North Carolina heading to the Knicks, then to the Seattle SuperSonics, then staying with the Braves.

McAdoo, the Braves' No. 1 choice in the 1972 draft, is in the final year of a five-year contract paying him $400,000 this season — $200,000 in cash and $200,000 in deferred payments.

In 20 games this year, the 25-year-old McAdoo has averaged 23.7 points and 13.2 rebounds. In his four previous seasons he had a 28.5 scoring average including an 18.0 mark his first year.

McMillen, 23, a 6-11 second-year pro out of Maryland, is averaging 5.1 points and 3.5 rebounds this year. He was a No. 1 draft choice in 1974 but didn't join the Braves that year. He was a Rhodes scholar and spent 1974 playing basketball in Bologna, Italy, where he averaged 32 points a game.

Gianelli, 6-10, a lanky 26-year-old who was Houston's second-round draft choice from the University of the Pacific in 1972 and was sold to the Knicks that year, was averaging 10.8 points for the Knicks this season. In four previous seasons he had an 8.0 average.

Dorsett receives award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh, lauded by rival coach Joe Paterno of Penn State as ::The greatest football player we have ever played against," officially received the Heisman trophy as the top college player in the nation. Thursday night and said he "hoped the good Lord would help me live up to such an outstanding award."

The senior tailback, who led the nation in rushing this past season in becoming the only player ever to gain more than 6000 yards during a college career, was accompanied by his mother and father, two sisters and three brothers to the ceremony and is the only Pitt player ever to receive the coveted trophy.

Johnny Majors, Dorsett's coach who is leaving Pittsburgh after this season to take a head coaching spot at Tennessee, said he doubted he would ever have the privilege of coaching a player as good as Dorsett for the rest of his career.

Cloutier sparks Noriqdue win

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Real Cloutier scored three goals to run his season total to 27 and tie for the World Hockey Association scoring lead as Quebec Nordiques handed Phoenix Roadrunners a club-record sixth consecutive loss, 5-4 Thursday night. It was the only scheduled game.

Rain good news for steelheaders

alec merriman

NOW! Get out that steel-

NOW! Get out that steelhead gear and start probing the rivers.

This week's storm and heavy rain was just what steelheaders have been looking for to flush out the rivers of those rotting salmon and to bring the water levels up.

A little colder weather will attract the waiting steelhead into the rivers, but too much cold would also drop water levels.

There are four to five-pound steelhead in the lower reaches of the Cowichan River, but the water level is still low in spite of the heavy rains this week. As a river fed by a big lake it is slow to rise, but it is also slow to drop. Once it reaches good fishing levels it maintains those levels much more consistently than most rivers.

The Indian food fishery in the Cowichan will be shut down Dec. 14 and that means there should be no netting, gaffing or spearing of steelhead or salmon. Consequently, the steelhead will be getting through the lower reaches.

San Jean and Harris Creek have already been giving up the odd steelhead.

Now is the time to start fishing the Sooke.

Campbell and Quinsam Rivers have been producing a few steelhead.

Lake fishing is still well worth trying and anglers in Quamichan, Somenos and Wild Deer Lakes have been meeting with good success with bobber and single pale pink eggs.

Big question is whether or not Wednesday's storm will have an effect on the fishing patterns. Undoubtedly the Brotchie Ledge to Clover Point run will continue good as it always does at this time of year.

A big block of feed has been hanging about off Frazer Island at the entrance to Becher Bay. Should that feed have been blown shorewards this might be the weekend that the Buzz Bombers and other drift fishermen start catching those good-sized winter chinooks by casting around the log booms right in Becher Bay.

The same situation exists for the Sooke Harbor fishing. The chinooks have been off Secretary Island, but they should be moving into the big hold by Whiffen Spit any day.

Most of the Sooke chinook fishing has been off Church Rock and Beechey Head.

At Pedder Bay anglers have started to find the chinooks closer to shore, off the kelp beds at Calver Point where last Sunday Robert Saxon took a 32-pounder and someone else got a 24-pounder. But the majority of the fish have been in the four to six-pound bracket. Two pounds of weight, 30 feet of line, anchovie and big flasher has been a good combination.

Pedder Bay starts its first Winter Chinook Fishing Derby Saturday and it continues until Jan. 2 in the waters from Albert Head to Beechey Head, with weigh-ins at Pedder Bay Marina.

Entry fee will be purchase of a Krippled Anchovie head at Pedder Bay Marina, which will also entitle purchasers to a free derby ticket and some free anchovies.

There will be a trophy for the heaviest salmon, plus many hidden weight prizes, including a special draw Dec. 24 for a case of Christmas cheer.

Other prizes will include an Edward downrigger, a Texas mickey, life jackets, 50 pounds of anchovies and many others to a $500 value.

Saanich Inlet fishing has been fair, but half the catch has been coho grilse, taken real deep, some of them just legal size, and others in the 2½-pound bracket. Some anglers have even gone back to spinner and worm fishing, something we hopefully thought had been dropped after the 12-inch size limit and the four-fish catch limit came in.

Those fish will grow. We catch enough of them while fishing for decent-sized salmon, without having to go to special gear to catch the grilse.

Senanus Island water and the Tod Inlet-Willis Point wall have been giving up seven to 15-pound chinooks on Radiant Squirts and Buzz Bombs.

Jet coach resigns

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Lou Holtz resigned Thursday as head coach of New York Jets, just one day after he said he would be back with the National Football League team next year. The Jets play their final game of the regular season Sunday of the regular season Sunday at Shea Stadium against Cincinnati Bengals. With a loss, they could equal last year's record of 3-11, the worst in the club's history.

Holtz's reign as head coach ended after just one season. Last Feb. 10, he left North Carolina State and signed a five-year contract worth an estimated $100,000 a year as the successor to Charley Winner — and to Ken Shipp, the Jets' late-season interim coach after Winner was fired on Nov. 19, 1975.

Big chinook product of Skagit program

Wally Kennedy's adipose fin-clipped 34-pound winter chinook, taken from Beechey Head two weeks ago, was from an experimental release of extended-reared salmon from the Washington State's Skagit River hatchery.

That information was supplied Thursday by federal fisheries, who made a special check of the code tag which had been planted in the salmon head.

It was a four-year-old from the 1972 brood, and as it was still immature and feeding, it would have likely returned to the Skagit next fall as a five-year-old chinook.

Chinook salmon generally go to sea as 90-day-old fry, but in the experiments for extended rearing they can be held and fed for anywhere up to a year before release. The reason is to get the smolts to a size where they are really big and more able to compete in the ocean environment where they can grow faster and bigger than the 90-day fry.

Fish held back before release to sea also have a tendency not to stray so far from their home river.

Swiss miss wins World Cup opener

AP-Reuter

VAL D'ISERE, France (CP) — Lise-Marie Morerod of Switzerland shrugged off an uncommon case of nerves Thursday to win the season's first World Cup race, the women's giant slalom.

The women's downhill at this French resort Wednesday was to officially start the World Cup season but had to be postponed because of a blinding snowstorm after several competitors had already completed the test.

The continuing storm threatened to cancel or postpone Thursday's race as well, but judges decided to allow the race to begin and the stylish 20-year-old Swiss girl, favored to win this year's women's World Cup, finished just ahead of Abbi Fisher of the United States.

Austrian Annemarie Proell-Moser, returning to World Cup racing after a year's absence and regaining her amateur status, was a strong third followed by Bernadette Zurbriggen, also of Switzerland, and Canada's Olympic gold medallist, Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont.

Morerod is expected to capture women's honors despite the return of Proell-Moser, who won the combined title five years running—1971-75 — before her retirement.

The Swiss girl completed the 1150-metre run through 57 gates and down a vertical drop of 320 metres in one minute 16.91 seconds to edge Fisher, 1:17.09, and Proell-Moser, 1:17.29.

Zurbriggen's time was 1:17.64. Kreiner, who won an Olympic gold in this event at Innsbruck in February, was clocked at 1:17.96.

Joan Wilson of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., the first known Maritime skier to be selected to Canada's national ski team, claimed 29th over all with a time of 1:20.40. Other Canadians completing the run were Karen Cloutier of Lorraine, Que., 51st with a time of 1:21.74; Susan Aslett, Toronto, 67th, 1:23.55, and Jane Tidball, Langley, B.C., 71st, 1:24.03.

Former Argonaut plans comeback

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Stillwagon, former defence tackle with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, says he wants to return to professional football next season.

Stillwagon, 27, decided to sit out this year after playing five seasons with the Argonauts. He was traded to British Columbia Lions at the beginning of the season for future considerations, but he rejected the Lions' contract proposals. He now is a free agent.

He played in only three games in 1975 because of knee and thumb injuries.

Czechs on way for WHA test

TORONTO (UPI) — The Czechoslovakian national hockey team, a finalist in last September's Canada Cup tournament, returns to Canada today for a six-game series against World Hockey Association clubs.

The Czechs will arrive on a flight from Frankfurt, stay overnight and then travel to Winnipeg for their first game, Sunday against the Jets.

They then play in Edmonton against the Oilers, Dec. 13; in Calgary against the Cowboys, Dec. 15; in St. Paul against the Fighting Saints, Dec. 17; in Hartford against the New England Whalers, Dec. 20; and in Indianapolis against the Racers, Dec. 22.

The Czech team, defending world champions, reached the finals of the Canada Cup but was defeated by Team Canada, 2-0, in the best-of-three series.

Nine players from the Canada Cup series, including high-scoring centre Milan Novy, and goaltender Vladimir Dzurilla, will play in the upcoming series.

Soon after the Czechs depart, an all-star squad from the Soviet Union will play an eight-game series against WHA clubs. The Russian series, Dec. 27-Jan. 8, will include games in Hartford, Cincinnati, Houston, Indianapolis, San Diego, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Quebec.

Umpires seek healthy raise

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Major league umpires, seeking to keep pace with players in baseball's spiraling salary structure, are seeking a 30 per cent across-the-board benefits increase in their negotiations with owners.

"Our aim and our goal is to equal the approximate 30 per cent increase the players got in their contract with the owners," John Cifelli, the Chicago-based negotiator for the umpires association, said Wednesday.

First-year umpires currently earn $15,500 a season, with salaries increasing to $37,500 after 20 years. Under the contract the umpires are seeking, those figures would jump to $20,150 the first year and almost $50,000 after 20.

"Our objective— and it's long overdue — is to have the first $50,000-a-year umpire," Cifelli said.

In addition to the salary increases, umpires are asking for a "gag rule" similar to that employed by the National Football League, which would prohibit public criticism of umpires by managers, coaches, players and team owners.

The umpires are also asking for the right to appeal when censored or fined by the league offices, a right already won by the players, and additional compensation for special events such as the world series, playoffs and all-star games, which would be equally divided among the association.

Tight rushing race shares NFL spotlight

Next to the decisions needed to settle playoff berths, the most interesting thing about the last weekend of schedule play in the National Football League is the battle for the rushing championship.

Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, who appeared all but a cinch two weeks ago, is leading with 1341 yards, but two successive 200-yard games has moved O. J. Simpson within nine yards.

Simpson, who missed training camp this year and gained comparatively-few yards in early games, and Payton both face tough tasks Sunday in closing games. Buffalo Bills are up against Baltimore Colts, but Simpson's job won't be much, if any tougher than that facing Payton because Denver Broncos have one of the better defence clubs in the league although they haven't the record to match that of the Colts.

There is also a close race among receivers for the last games to decide.

Veteran running-back McArthur Lane of the Kansas City Chiefs leads as a pass target with 60 receptions, three more than Lydell Mitchell of the Colts. Only four receptions behind are Drew Pearson of the Dallas Cowboys and Bob Chandler of the Bills. And Chuck Foreman of Minnesota Vikings is close enough to hope with 54 catches.

Soccer visitors limited

ROSARIO, Argentina (CP) — Argentina's World Cup soccer organizers said Thursday they may have to limit the number of visitors to the country during the 1978 Cup finals.

The vice-president of the state's World Cup organization, navy captain Carlos Alberto Lacoste, told a meeting of local travel agents: "We don't want people sleeping in squares or hitchhiking around."

Lacoste, who has also been co-opted as non-voting member of the International Football Federation's (FIFA) Cup organizing committee, said: "The country's hotel infrastructure calls for an urgent review which we cannot say will be put into practice before the World Cup."

NL clears way for return to Washington

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National League cleared the way for a return of major-league baseball to Washington, D.C., for the 1978 season Thursday, proposing a plan of action to the American League which involves Baltimore Orioles playing a portion of their games in the capital for 1977.

National League owners voted to suspend for one year their unanimous vote requirement to add teams to their 12-club league.

It was that unanimous-vote requirement that vetoed earlier plans for a return to Washington, which has not had a major-league club since the Senators left following the 1971 season.

In their proposal, the National League owners told the American League they would provide a club for Washington either by expansion or transfer of another existing franchise for 1978. They did not rule out the possibility of accepting one of the American League franchises for membership in Washington.

There has been a proposal to move the financially-troubled Oakland A's of the American League to Washington as an NL team.

As part of their recommendation, the National League clubs suggested that Baltimore play 13 home games in Washington's RFK Stadium and that each of the other 13 American League teams also play one of their games in the capital to produce a 26-game package.

The action came as officials in Washington were considering recommendations of the House of Representatives select committee on sports to reconsider baseball's long-standing anti-trust immunity.

In other developments, the National League owners re-elected Chub Feeney as president of the league and stipulated that league offices be transferred from San Francisco to New York City by April 1, 1977.

Feeney, whose four-year term of office was due to expire in 1977, would not reveal the length of his new term.

Originally he was elected NL president in 1969 and then re-elected in 1973.

Feeney said the National League office would be moved from San Francisco to New York City by April 1. Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn has long wanted both league offices in New York to give baseball a centralized headquarters.

When Feeney accepted the job originally, he had insisted that the NL office be located in San Francisco, his hometown. Apparently he felt obliged to give up that requirement in the face of the strong opposition within the league.

At least three clubs — St. Louis Cardinals, New York Mets and Montreal Expos — were reported critical of Feeney's performance, particularly after the National League lost Toronto to the American League.

The AL added expansion teams in Toronto and Seattle for 1977 after the National League had toyed for some time with the idea of placing a franchise in the Canadian city.

Montreal loses 'game'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National League president Chub Feeney announced Thursday that the 1978 all-star baseball game will be played in San Diego. Originally, the National League had planned to have the game played in Montreal but final lease arrangements for the Olympic Stadium have not been completed by the Expos and the league decided to shift to San Diego instead, Feeney said. The 1977 all-star game will be played in New York's Yankee Stadium.

Finley takes aim at Kuhn again

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charlie Finley launched into another verbal attack on Bowie Kuhn at the winter baseball meetings Thursday, accusing the commissioner of spearheading a plan to move the Oakland A's to Washington behind his back.

Finley, holding court in the hotel lounge, told a group of newsmen that he was never consulted on the proposed shift of his A's to Washington and the National League despite reports to the contrary. He said he first had heard about it was in a telephone discussion with American League president Lee MacPhail 10 days ago.

"During the discussion with Lee MacPhail, I'm talking about the one I had with him 10 days ago when I asked him about the players' salaries, he told me about Bowie Kuhn's proposal to have my team move to Washington," said Finley. "And MacPhail said to me 'of course, to get you to Washington, you'd have to drop your lawsuit against the owners (and Kuhn).'

"I said no way. No way in the world I'd ever do a thing like that."

"When I think of this situation, it makes me think that if Bowie Kuhn has a brain in his head he's an idiot. I mean he comes here and drops this bomb, saying 'yes, there has been some discussion of the A's moving to Washington' and what's that gonna make my fans in Oakland think. They've got to think Finley's in on this."

Finley, who already has a lawsuit against Kuhn pending regarding the commissioner's voiding of the million dollar sales of Oakland players Joe Rudi, Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers, hinted he may go to court over the A's to Washington controversy also.

"This whole thing sounds like a conspiracy," Finley said. "I don't mind telling you I came here fighting mad. I mean didn't I have enough problems before this? I've lost six players and now they're trying to move me to Washington without even consulting me. Bowie Kuhn is cutting me from ear to ear and letting me bleed like a stuck hog."

Finley added that he would demand an explanation from Kuhn.

"I'm gonna demand that he clear me of this whole thing tomorrow," Finley said. "And make it known that all this business of the A's to Washington was discussed without my knowledge."

In regard to his suit on the players sales which goes to court next week in Chicago, Finley said: "I sure hope I win this one. I think I'm due to win one, but if it's any consolation (former Chicago White Sox' manager) Paul Richards told me there's not an owner in baseball who in his heart doesn't know I'm 100 per cent right."

Kingdome scrap produces suit

SEATTLE (AP) — A woman injured in a mishap during a Seattle Seahawks National Football League game at the Kingdome has filed a $1 million claim against the city of Seattle. Susan Pennock, 28, suffered a fractured vertebra when a participant in a grandstand fight fell on her. she has been in hospital since the Nov. 1 mishap and underwent surgery recently. Doctors said she will be in a body cast for four months.

Soviets aid Indian reactor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has concluded a contract to supply India with 200 tons of heavy water for its Canadian-supplied nuclear reactor, knowledgeable sources said here.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said the Soviet Union has been negotiating safeguards with the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna to limit the use of the heavy water strictly to peaceful energy production.

U.S. officials were described as not unduly upset by the Soviet sale because of the relatively stringent safeguards which are to accompany it.

The sale of materials for use in India's reactor has been controversial since India detonated a nuclear device in May, 1974.

While India claimed the explosion was for peaceful purposes, it focused world attention on the feasibility of diverting nuclear fuel from power reactors into nuclear weapons.

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Agency currently has held up licences for the export of enriched uranium to India pending negotiations on returning irradiated fuel to the United States.

Reflecting the growing concern over nuclear proliferation, President Ford called in October, 1976, for a three-year moratorium on the sale of nuclear technology and supplies to developing countries while stringent international safeguards are worked out.

Record not enough

It was crying time for Kitty O'Neil and her rocket car at Fields, Ore., this week, when her attempt at land speed record was cancelled due to legal action involving a Chicago company. Monday, she had set women's record of 512.7 miles an hour, and had high hopes of toppling 1970 mark of 631.367.

Thailand says no to more refugees

BANGKOK (UPI) — Thailand, a haven for refugees from neighboring Indochina since the communist takeover last year, said this week — "We cannot take any more of them."

Interior Minister Samak Sundaravej said Thailand would stop accepting refugees from Indochina by the end of the year.

Samak said there were 76,000 refugees in Thailand and, "we cannot take any more of them."

The government announced last month it will stop accepting funds from the UN High Commission for refugees so it will be free to send refugees back to their own countries.

"If we take the money from the UNHCR, we cannot send them back against their will," Samak told a news conference. The $12.5 million UNHCR fund for refugees will run out Dec. 31.

"For the remaining refugees who came in before Aug. 4, we will take care of them but will negotiate to have them sent back home, look for a third country to take them and set up an area for them to live and give them some training, so they can make a living," Samak said.

Referring to reports that Cambodian communist Khmer Rouge troops killed 26 Cambodians who were sent home Nov. 23 by Thai border officials, Samak said, "we learned later from the officials at the border that they were all killed but so far there has not been any confirmation yet.

"Anyhow, we will find out whether they have been killed or whether they are still alive and well at their hometown as said by the Khmer officials," he said.

Lively audience hears mayoral arguments

North Saanich Ald. Eric Sherwood effectively deflated charges that he was an outsider and a "puppet of North Saanich" at a candidate meeting this week for the Sidney moral contest.

Sherwood is facing Sidney Ald. Dick Leigh in a byelection this Saturday to fill the seat vacated by Peter Malcolm, who is resigning in midterm.

Sherwood and Leigh were at Sidney Silver Threads to present their platforms and answer questions. About 60 senior citizens attended.

Sherwood noted numerous examples of candidates running for office in municipalities other than own. He reminded the audience, which applauded his presentation, that former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen lived in Oak Bay during his term of office and that Central Saanich mayor Jean Butler lived in North Saanich.

On Nov. 23, Mayor Malcolm called Sherwood a "puppet of North Saanich" and said Sherwood's election to the regional board would give North Saanich two representatives and Sidney none. (Sherwood is also running for a regional board seat against Sidney Ald. Jerry Tregaskis.)

Leigh's campaign brochures emphasize that he and not Sherwood is a Sidney resident and taxpayer. (Sherwood pays a business tax in Sidney, but is not a property owner there.)

Both candidates agreed on every question put fordward by the spirited audience. Whether Sidney would require a Sidney resident for mayor was the only unresolved question at the meeting. It has been the only controversial issue in the two-week campaign.

Sherwood
. . . no puppet

Both candidates are promising to keep costs down. Sherwood calls it "being frugal;" Leigh describes it as "keeping the lid on."

The major issues facing voters over the next few years are seen by the candidates as:

Water distribution within the municipality. (On Jan. 1, 1977, the Capital Regional District will take over the function of water supply for Central and North Saanich and Sidney; the three municipalities will handle distribution. Water will be carried from the Sooke watershed and supply rates will be fixed by the reagional district.)

Policing costs. The police issue revolves around the question of whether Sidney is a city or a town. The Municipal Act defines a city as an area with more than 5,000 people (Sidney has more than 6,000). If Sidney officially becomes a city, it may have to provide its own police force. Both Sherwood and Leigh favor the RCMP as a full-time force, and believe the city-town issue should be left alone.

Leigh
. . . no dispute

Recreation. Both candidates approve the 17-acre site on East Saanich Road south of McTavish for the new Sidney-North Saanich recreation centre. The site, acquired without capital outlay by North Saanich from Park Pacific Developments, has space for construction of a curling rink if desired.

Both candidates are public works chairmen of their councils and are on the respective fire committees.

Sherwood told the audience: "I'm a puppet of no person, no clique, no pressure group Threads and a director of directors of Sidney Silver or party. I'm on the board of Sanscha Hall. I've put in thousands of hours of community work in Sidney. Tell me who's the outsider now."

Leigh reminded the audience he had no "personal animosities" toward Sherwood. "It's up to you people to decide who's the best person for the job," he said.

Both Sherwood and Leigh said it would be difficult to hold down the mill rate in the face of Sidney's expected growth.

Human rights 'deteriorating'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amnesty International said this week the human rights situation around the world is deteriorating and torture is a "common practice" in about 60 countries.

Declaring 1977 International Prisoners of Conscience Year, the nonpartisan international group said it intended to launch "an all-out offensive on behalf of human rights throughout the world."

Whitney Ellsworth, chairman of the organization, said that since 1961 the group had been instrumental in freeing about 9,000 prisoners of conscience, and its influence was growing, but "the human rights situation around the world has deteriorated at an alarmingly faster rate."

"The militarization of the southern cone of Latin America, post-independence Africa turning to one-party systems, the prevalence of permanent states of emergency in many Asian countries, the continued suppression of the human rights movement in the Soviet Union . . .are chilling tesimony to the ability of government to suspend freedom and supress basic human rights of its citizens," Ellsworth told a news conference.

The organization's 1975-76 report cites, in addition to the common-place practice of torture in 60 countries, 112 nations with signifieant human rights violations — usually imprisonment for religious or political beliefs, color or ethnic orign. The countries were not named.

The report said the 1977 campaign would include an efort to increase the group's membership from 50,000 to 100,000 and a world-wide petition campaign aiming at two million signatures, to be presented to the UN General Assembly, demanding release of all "prisoners of conscience."

Ellsworth said the organization would open an oppice in Washington "in order to provide information to the congress and the new administration, since we hope they will both make human rights more of a factor in United States foreign policy."

NATO to delay system decision

BRUSSELS (CP) — North Atlantic defence ministers have agreed to delay for at least two months a decision to set up an airborne early warning system in Europe to cost about $2.5 billion.

Canadian Defence Minister Barney Danson told reporters Canada's share of the cost would be about $200 million, spread over several years. Canada would get some construction contracts.

He said Canada must in the meantime decide whether to participate with the United States in a North American airborne scheme. He will fly to Washington next week to discuss the issue.

Informants said the U.S. government was strongly urging Canada to take part in the scheme.

The effectiveness of the proposed European airborne system would be greatly curtailed if the flying radar screens could not operate over Canada, use Canadian airfields or relay signals to Canadian ground stations.

Danson said the Canadian government had made no dicision to join the North American system, to which the U.S. government is already committed.

One factor in the decision would be the kind and cost of Canadian involvement, he said. Roles could range from merely supplying ground support to flying planes.

Danson also confirmed that he was reassessing the Canadian commitment under NATO to supply forces to the alliance's northern flank—Norway and Denmark—in case of emergecy.

He met his Norwegian counterpart here Tuesday, but said no decisions were made.

The problem was that the Canadian commitment was not clear, he said, adding that he also wondered whether Canadian NATO forces should not be concentrated in one area, rather than spread among several.

Canada has 5,000 soldiers and airmen based in Iahr, West Germany.

There were also logistic problems with the northern flak commitment, he said.

Although troops could be flown to Norway within days, their heavy equipment would take weeks to arrive by ship from Canada. That would leave them defenceless under threat of attack.

Britain and some other ANTO members had pressed hard for an immediate decision on the European project, known as the Aairborne Warning and Control System. But West German political problems delayed final decision.

Vietnam renews railway link

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Vietnam has completed the restoration of the 1,080-mile war-damaged railway linking Hanoi with Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, the Vietnam news agency reported.

Committee formed

Syria, Jordan agree on union

AMMAN (Reuter) — Syria and Jordan, virtually at war six years ago, have announced their intention to create a form of union and set up a committee to work out the steps.

The plan was set out in a joint statement issued after a two-day official visit here by Syrian President Hafez al-Assad.

A high-level joint committee will work out the steps toward closer co-operation and report to a supreme leadership composed of Assad and Jordan's King Hussein.

The two leaders reviewed progress toward co-ordination so far achieved and feel a more advanced formula on unifying governmental systems should be drawn up, the statement said.

Informed sources said earlier they gave final approval to unification of their economic, educational, legal, tele-communications and customs systems.

The move was recommended by their prime ministers meeting in Damascus last month.

Jordan and Syria were virtually at war six years ago over the way Hussein's mainly Bedouin army clamped down on Palestinian commandos.

They began drawing together in the face of Egypt's determination to reach a new disengagement agreement with Israel in 1975 without concluding agreements for similar Israeli withdrawals from occupied land on the Syrian and Jordanian fronts.

New head of National Arts Centre warns:

Art is not cheap

By LIANE HELLER

MONTREAL (CP) — Art is not cheap, Donald MacSween says.

The city of Vienna spends $40 million a year on the arts.

And even with a $25-million subsidy, seats at the Paris Opera cost as much as $40.

"It's unfortunate that even with such high subsidies, seats have to be so high-priced," MacSween said in an interview here.

In less than six months, problems like federal aid and ticket prices will become more than subjects for conversation, as fas as MacSween is concerned.

The 41-year-old director of the National Theatre School (NTS) has been appointed to replace G. Hamilton Southam, retiring general manager of the National Arts Centre (NAC) in Ottawa.

Next April, MacSween will leave the familar hallways and offices of the NTS for the modern luxury of the arts centre.

He won't be treading on unknown territory, however. He has spent countless evenings at the NAC. It's just that his involvement with the centre will go beyond sitting in one of the three theatres to watch a play or concert.

The prospect, he said, is "terribly exciting."

"It's like having your own little London or New York readily available," he said.

With two restaurants, lounges, shops, a gallery display area, its own orchestra and series in French and English theatre, opera, dance and pop concerts, the NAC offers, as Southam has said, "almost everything to everybody."

The NAC, from its inception in 1969, was intended to fulfil rather stringent requirements.

The quality of the entertainment must be of the highest level; the price of admission must be as low as possible. The NAC should function as a showcase for Canadian and, in some cases, foreign performers; it must also act as a laboratory, creating in-house productions and companies. The centre must provide both French and English productions.

In short, the NAC was devised as a paragon of the arts, an example for Canadian arts centres, companies and individual performers to look up to.

To MacSween, maintaining, developing and carrying out these mandates are the most important responsibilities he'll have.

He would like to see the NAC form a resident theatre company, about 15 to 20 of the country's leading actors.

The company members would be "resident in Ottawa, on a basic retainer, performing one or two major roles and several minor roles during the course of a season. The rest of the time they would be free to job out (perform with other companies or do films."

If such a company were created, it would act as a "chemical reaction," stimulating the country's theatre groups to set up similar organizations, which could exchange casts and programs.

"It's like the difference between pickup football and the development of teams and a league. No matter how magnificent the pickup teams are, the time has perhaps come for a national theatre."

As far as the NAC role in forming such a company, "I hope it will happen."

"So far, the accent has been placed on the musical side. A permanent orchestra was an obvious necessity," he said.

Of course, forming an in-house French and English theatre company — not to mention a dance ensemble — requires a "healthy subsidy."

The NAC already receives the highest subsidy of any arts centre in Canada. Of its $14-million budget for 1975-1976, about $8 million came from the federal treasury board, $3.5 million from box office revenue and the remainder from the Canada Council, the regional municipality of Ottawa-Carleton and other subsidies.

But while attendance at the NAC continued to run high during the last season, at 79 per cent of capacity with programs such as the concert, opera and theatre series drawing 98.4 per cent of capacity, the centre's deficit in 1975-76 was the highest in its during the last season, at 79

While MacSween wants to continue the fight for higher subsidies and low ticket prices, he will have a tough job on his hands.

Because of the deficit, the centre's annual report says, ticket prices will have to increase and some programs will have to be cut or postponed.

MacSween hasn't developed any specific plans for the extensive responsibilities that will be his in April. He will head a staff of 300. He will be responsible for every aspect of the NAC operation, financial and artistic.

At a news conference, when his appointment was announced, MacSween said he felt a sense of the NAC's "controlled chaos."

"If it were to run as smoothly as your local McDonald's something would be wrong with the organization," he said. "When you have a group of highly creative people working together, the building's bound to vibrate. It's totally different sort of operation."

MacSween's three years at the NTS — although on a much lower scale — involved that kind of responsibility, urgency and enthusiasm.

He talked lovingly about the theatre school he joined in 1973, after 10 years as a lawyer.

MacSween has had something to do with theatre since his McGill University days. He helped found the McGill annual show, the Red and White Révue; he co-wrote and appeared in My Fur Lady, which was later performed on a cross-country tour.

MacSween said he doesn't know the exact reasons he was chosen for the NAC job.

"To begin with, I fulfilled the basic prerequisites; I'm bilingual and Canadian."

He smiled. "That's a good start."

New light shed on blood clots

By HARRY NELSON
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A team of British medical researchers recently published a report that helps to explain why the tiny structures called platelets that make blood clots do not form clots in arteries that are healthy.

It also helps explain whyc clots may form in arteries that are not healthy — clots that can trigger a heart attack or a stroke.

The Britishers discovered that healthy artery walls release a chemical which can keep platelets from clumping.

According to scientists, the chemical is the most powerful inhibitor of platelet clumping yet discovered.

The chemical discovered by Vane and his group is prostaglandin which, to date, they have called prostglandin X (PGX). Identification of its structure was a joint effort by Wellcome Research Laboratories in England, where Vane is research director, and the Upjohn Co.

Their discovery and the identification of PGX's chemical makeup opens possibilities for developing new drugs to prevent or treat heart attacks and strokes.

Here is the theoretical basis for believing that PGX may, in five to 10 years, lead to new cardiovascular drugs:

Last year a Swedish researcher, Bengt Samuelsson of the Karolinska Institute, discovered that when platelets stick to one another they release a substance called thromboxane A2 (TCA).

TXA is a powerful stimulatn for the clumping of platelets. This clumping is the basis for the formation of a blood clot. Blood clot formation is sa very desirable thing if, for example, the artery has been severed. The clot serves as a plug to fill the hile and stop the bleeding.

But if the platelets clump and eventually form a clot inside an artery, the clot might break loose and travel to the heart or brain, causing a heart attack or stroke.

Vane and other scientists theorize that this does not happen if the artery is healthy. The reason, they speculate, is that platelets, when they touch a healthy artery wall, release a substance which the inner lining of the wall used to make PGX.

Because PGXisapowerflu

However, if the artery wall is not healthy and has deposits of fatty material called plaques, there will be no opportunity for the substance released by the platelets to be used to make PGX. The platelets may, however, continue to release TXA, the platelet clumper, resulting in the formation of a dangerous clot.

If the British and Swedish work does lead to the development of drugs helpful to humans, Vane envisions they might be useful either for providing the PGX not released by unhealthy arteries or to inhibit substances involved in platelet clumping.

However, he pointed out that a great many potential obstacles must be overcome before any usable drug becomes available. Vane estimated that will take five to 10 years.

Novel exhibits presented

The exhibits range from what is claimed to be the world's thinnest watch to a big road transporter that, the makers say, can carry loads of up to 50 tons, no matter how delicate, thanks to a secret suspension system.

Many exhibits reflect such current trends as an electrical acupuncture machine and numerous devices harnessing the sun to economize on energy use.

They vary from under-floor home heating with water, warmed by the sun through a special glass roof, to a garden barbecue, comprising a radar-shaped reflective disc with a grill in the middle.

For the adventurous there is an all-purpose survival suit which, it is said, will also repel sharks.

Piano here to stay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The old upright piano may no longer be a status symbol in every middle-class parlor, but John Steinway says there's no need to fear for the future of the piano business.

He was here, talking pianos, for a ceremony at which the Smithsonian Institution acquired from Steinway and Sons a travel-scarred grand concert piano that Ignace Jan Paderewski hauled across North America in a railroad car during a 75-concert tour in 1892-93.

"Young people's interest in making music, from folksinging and guitar to grand opera, is strong today," Steinway said. "And of course the piano is your basic instrument."

he said the industry sells about 200,000 uprights a year and his firm has six months of back orders for grand pianos.

The firm was founded in 1853 by John's great grandfather. Eight members of the Steinway family attended the ceremony, including the three brothers who run the company, which is now a subsidiary of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Padereski was lured to America by John Steinway's grandfather, who recognized the promotional benefits of such a tour.

The pianist toured every season for nearly half a century, taking a fresh piano each time.

Today the keys are plastic instead of ivory but concert grands built now — the process takes a year — don't differ much from the one Paderewski picked out at the factory 84 years ago.

Warning: Hobbies may be injurious to your health

LONDO N(Reuter) — Doctors, who often advise patients to take up a hobby to relax, are looking more closely at hobbies as possible sources of patients' complaints.

the weekly medical journal General Practitioners, says doctors should be asking: "What are your hobbies?"

The increasing technonogical complexity of modern hobbies is putting many creative users of leisure at risk.

People who do their own car maintenance, building, woodwork, painting or decorating suffer the same "industrial diseases" as those doing these jobs for a living.

Asbestos dust may cause fatal lung diseases. Oil-soaked over-alls may produce cancer of the scrotum.

The key difference beteen the amateur and the professional running such risks, General Practitioner notes, is that "if the amateur does contract any of the industrial diseases that would entitle a professional to industrial injuries benefit, he will receive nothing because the disease was not contracted as a result of his employment."

Sculptors may suffer silicosis, a lung disease also known as potter's rot, while firing statues and pots. Amateur potters also run a risk of absorbing lead contained in the glaze.

General Practitioner blames premature deafness in teenagers on noisy discotheques, where the noise level is higher than the industrial limit of 90 decibels during an eight-hour shift.

Apparently there is no escape. Book-collectors, not subject to machinery, animals, or noise, may suffer a variety of the "curse of the pharaohs."

Those who first explored the pyramids were killed by what was thought to be a curse but as actually the spores in ancient dust. Less deadly forms of this syndrome may be contracted through undisturbed dust, such as the disorders suffered by librarians handling very old volumes.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure you've never had a problem like mine before. What troubles me is that I have no problems.

I don't want to sound conceited but I am a very pretty, mature 16-year-old girl. My figure is great. My skin is like peaches and cream. I have all the dates I can handle. Loads of girl friends say they wish they were in my shoes.

My grades are tops and I win everything I try for at school. Something has to be wrong with me because nobody's perfect. What could it be? — Miss Want To Know.

Dear Miss: The fact that you view yourself as flawless is a serious fault right there. Add to that your statement that you have absolutely no problems. What this means is you don't know a problem when you see one, kiddo — and that can be the biggest problem of all.

Dear Ann Landers: A nice neighbor introduced us to a young man who recently moved to town and was interested in renting a room with a respectable family. We liked him at once and we rented him our spare room the following weekend.

Fred (not his real name) is a nice chap but when I clean his room I can't help but notice the magazines he buys. They are so trashy I hate to have them in the house. Of course I can't say anything to him because it isn't my business. Fred also gets mail from all over the country. This does bother me because I'm sure the mail is in response to the ads I've seen in those terrible magazines.

You have spoken out against lonely-hearts clubs and warned your readers not to become involved with strangers. I wonder if advertising in magazines and newspapers for social contract is the result of the loneliness that seems so intense because of the sorry state of the world today. Will you comment, please? — Just An Observer.

Dear Just: There have always been lonely people in the world. Searching for friends through magazines and newspapers is not new.

A column in the Chicago Daily News, "Herguth's People," ran an item that appeared 100 years ago. It was an ad among the personals: "Young gentleman, 25 years of age, holding a good situation, desires the acquaintance of a young lady or widow of fair education, pleasing address, and some money. Object, matrimony. No triflers."

Dear Ann: You told "May-December" that a girl who marries a man old enough to be her father was probably rejected by her own dad and was looking for a "papa" substitute.

There's another explanation, Ann. A girl who idolizes her father often shuns men her own age and marries a man who reminds her of daddy. Please make this clear. Your answer, as it stood, could produce a tremendous amount of unearned guilt and Lord knows there's already enough in the world. Thanks for setting the record straight. — LLD.

Dear LLD: The girl who wrote was rejected by her father and she said so in her letter. But I'm glad you wrote lest my readers assume that only rejection sends a young girl into the arms of an older man. It could be father-worship as well. Thank you.

After welcome from Diefenbaker

Pearson fumbles first try as Opposition leader

By JOHN G. DIEFENBAKER
(Seventh of eight parts)

When I welcomed Lester Pearson to his new role as leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons on Jan. 20, 1958, I had no idea of the train of events he would put in motion. If someone had come to me that morning and told me of Pearson's proposed course of action, I would have laughed him out of my office.

Pearson rose from his desk that winter's afternoon to acknowledge the compliments of myself and the leaders of the other parties. He then launched into the standard Liberal criticism of my government's record which he ended with the motion that "His Excellency's advisers should, in the opinion of this House, submit their resignation forthwith."

I could barely believe my ears. I turned to Donald Fleming, my deskmate, and said, "This is the complete end of opposition to us." And, laughing, I turned to Howard Green and said, "This is it."

Imagine! They were ready, they were willing to take over the government of the country by a simple transfer. The supreme example of Liberal statesmanship was to annihilate us with a motion. "L'etat, c'est moi," was their attitude.

My speech in reply to Pearson was one so destructive to the Liberal party that many said it virtually decided the outcome of the next election. And they say, what do speeches in Parliament do?

In the days that followed the Pearson motion, the Liberal front bench made it obvious that they were moving from opposition to obstruction.

The Liberals under Pearson dismissed our Roads to Resources as wasting the public purse building roads from igloo to igloo. Many years before they had dismissed Sir John Macdonald's transcontinental railway as proceeding from teepee to teepee. Macdonald had brought Canada into being. I wanted to extend that vision. So di dthe people of Canada, for on March 31, 1958, my government was returned to office with the largest majority ever in the history of our nation.

I don't know how many meetings I addressed or how many miles I travelled during the 1958 election campaign. I am told that I spoke to 86 major meetings and travelled 17,000 miles. Each meeting and mile became part of the next, something indefinable made me forget the long hours, the labor, the distance. Everywhere, people raised their eyes to see the vision of Canada's greatness, and realized something of their own greatness.

"Where is Canada going?" was their question. I offered an answer. The New Frontier was North America's last frontier. It offered us a future uniquely Canadian; it offered us the opportunity to be uniquely ourselves. The response was overwhelming when I appealed to my fellow Canadians to "join with me."

On April 1, Olive and I returned to Ottawa from Prince Albert. There was work to be done.

On a normal morning, as prime minister, I would get up at half past five or a quarter to six. On first rising, I would have half a grapefruit or an orange and coffee. Then I would dictate memoranda, letters, etc., for an hour or so before I set off on my morning walk. I did not have security guards following me every place I went; I've never had them. I did take the obvious precaution of not always walking the same route, and thereby inviting trouble. I would try for a mile and a half each day, at about 140 to 160 paces a minute. When I returned home my wife and I would have a proper breakfast. I arrived at the office, ready for the day ahead, by eight o'clock.

How the present prime minister can take the days and weeks holidays he does is beyond me. Although I never considered myself overworked, a 14-hour day was the norm.

On becoming prime minister, I cut out a lot of the frills that my predecessor had tolerated. For example, he was in the habit of attending dinners at various embassies and high commissions. I did away with this.

When I arrived at my office each morning, the first person I saw was my executive assistant. As well as discussing expected development in the House, I looked at the messages from foreign countries and our missions abroad, then the background papers covering cabinet business, reports from the United Nations, and my correspondence for the day. Many letters did not require my personal attention. I would ask from time to time, however, to see random samples of these just to make certain that they were being answered properly.

Then there were meetings with various ministers who often wanted to see me before cabinet if they had a particular problem to discuss. I tried at all times to make myself easily accessible. This applied to the man in the street as well as to those who were highly placed.

There was never a time when I did not want to find out what people were thinking. I recall one occasion when a farmer from Alberta had an appointment with me. An important Canadian industrialist arrived and demanded to see me right away. Well, he had to wait his turn. He simply couldn't understand this, that a man of his importance should have to wait while this "rustic," as he described him, got in to see me first.

Most often, I had lunch at my desk. Once or twice a week I would have lunch at the cabinet table in the parliamentary restaurant. The Rideau Club was one I seldom went to. It is one of the most prestigious private clubs in Canada. I was the only prime minister who did not seek membership in it.

When the House was sitting, I tried to be at my Commons desk as often as I could, although I did not manage this to the extent that Prime Minister St. Laurent had. I felt it important that, as prime minister, I should participate in the debates under our parliamentary system. but this takes a lot of individual effort if one is not content to have others prepare final drafts of his material. When I participated in debate, I did not recite or read scripts, I entered into the current of discussion. To me, this is what Parliament is all about.

When a matter was difficult, when there was deep uncertainty, I took my time in deciding, time is often the politician's best friend. The best example of this was John A. Macdonald, who was called Old Man Tomorrow.

In the response to the criticism that my government could not act swiftly to meet the pressing needs of the nation, let me give one example to the contrary. When the non-operating unions of the two national railways called a strike for Dec. 3, 1960, a bill was introduced on Nov. 29, to provide for the continuation of railway operations. The House voted on this legislation at 4:30 p.m. on Dec. 2; the Senate approved it at 6 p.m.; it was signed into law by the Governor General at 6:30 p.m.

When we were in office, I decided there would never be any effective examination of government expenditures as long as the government controlled the public accounts committee through the nomination of its chairman. I decided this must end. In consequence, we established the practice that allowed a Liberal member, Alan Macnaughton (now a Senator), to serve as chairman. It was a system that worked well.

In the whole period of my prime ministership, we spent a total capital outlay of a mere $18,000 on the prime minister's residence. I had to pay $5,000 a year rental, as had St. Laurent and as would Pearson, a situation that no longer applies. This rental, I might add, was not tax deductible. Unfortunately, the philosophy today is spend, spend, tax, tax; that it is the public's money doesn't matter.

In caucus, I always placed before our members those matters that were going to come up in the House. Often, I would advance arguments in favor of propositions that I didn't have in mind at all in order to have them challenged. I wanted the caucus to be alive to the issues; to challenge and to weigh. There must be give and take in caucus, otherwise private members do not believe they are taking any part in the process of government.

Incredibly, I think our major difficulty after the 1958 election was that we had too large a majority. We would have been much better off had we only elected the 190 that St. Laurent had won in 1949, or better still, the 170 he elected in 1953.

Contrary to the practice of recent years, the ministers in my government attended the House of Commons. The idea that ministers ought not to because they are so overworked, which with one or two exceptions is not true in the first place, indicates a general contempt for the House of Commons.

Further, one of my admonitions to cabinet was that when a member of the Opposition advanced something worthwhile, I wanted to know about it at once. There was never any hesitation on my part to improve a piece of legislation. Prime Ministers Mackenzie King and St. Laurent were occasionally amenable to this approach, and to a lesser degree, so indeed was Pearson. There is none of that today.

Defendant denies heroin sale

A Port Hardy man told Victoria County Court Thursday he never sold a cap of heroin to an RCMP constable for $45 outside the Bastion Inn beer parlor Jan. 13.

David Kurt Brauner, 25, said he had never talked to Constable Allan Haslett at that beer parlor and the first time he ever saw him was at the preliminary hearing July 26.

He said he did not recall where he was Jan. 13 but he was in Victoria, Vancouver and Port Hardy during January. He said "I probably was, yes" at the Bastion Inn last January.

Taking the protection of the Canada Evidence Act — which means his answers cannot be used against him — he said he sold heroin on several occasions but not after he sold his house in November, 1975.

Haslett said he was introduced to Brauner at the Bastion Inn beer parlor and later, on the Langley Street sidewalk, made the purchase. He identified Brauner in court.

He said Brauner gave him a small ball of paper which he put in his mouth. Later, at the RCMP office, he examined it and found a small capsule containing a brown powder.

Brauner admitted a criminal record involving possession of heroin, trafficking in LSD and theft under $200.

Judge M. L. T. Drake adjourned the trial to give the defence an opportunity to question and possibly call a person as a witness. The trial will continue Dec. 20.

Fine, probation for selling speed

Stephen Forest Ramage, 21 was fined $500 and placed on probation for one year in Victoria County Court Thursday for trafficking in speed in Saanich Sept. 25, 1975.

Crown councel Derek Finall said Ramage sold one gram of speed for $35 to an RCMP officer acting in an undercover capacity.

Because it was a "serious offence" and because of a criminal record involving breaking and entering and theft and possession of hashish, he suggested a jail term would be appropriate.

But Judge M. L. T. Drake, after hearing the submission of defence councel Darrel Woods, said it was "reasonably clear" Ramage has made progress to break from drugs and it was "best settled" by a fine and probation.

Ramage was ordered as a condition of probation to refrain from associating with drug users or to use drugs.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 35-year-old mother of six boys aged seven to 17 pleaded guilty Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to a lesser charge of making a false application for welfare and received the maximum fine of $200.

Gail Avon Leachman, 140 Goward, Saanich, was originally charged with welfare fraud under the Criminal Code of Canada for taking $16,137.50 illegally in welfare benefits. The charge was dated July 29.

Lawyer George Jones, acting for Mrs. Leachman, entered a guilty plea to the lesser charge of making false application under the Social Assistance Act and crown counsel Armand Petronio accepted the plea and withdrew the original charge.

Judge Blake Allan, noting Mrs. Leachman had been deserted by her husband, had no income and had six boys to raise, levied the fine and gave her until April 1, 1977, to pay it.

Allan criticized welfare officials for insufficient investigation into cases before he passed sentence.

Petronio asked Allan to leave the question of resittution to the human resources ministry. Jones said outside the courtroom that any question of restitution may be a civil matter between the provincial ministry and Mrs. Leachman.

Two inmates at Wilkinson Road who were to have appeared Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court or a statutory remand didn't show up, to the surprise of no one.

Thomas Russell Totten, 26, and Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, escaped Tuesday night from the jail and are still at large.

They were scheduled for their regular, eight-day interim remand appearance Thursday before Judge William Ostler on charges of possession of house-breaking tools, due to trial Jan. 26.

Ostler went through the legal motion of issuing warrants for their arrest.

Robin Lee McLean, 26, of 3103 Metchosin Road, was remanded in custody for another day after her second appearance in court in two days.

A charge of possession of stolen property was amended to read Sidney instead of Victoria and defence lawyer George Jones asked for the remand until today for election on that charge and a further charge of possession of a stolen credit card.

The possession of stolen property charge is in connection with 10 rings, valued at more than $20,000, which went mising from a display case Nov. 27 at Grassie-Firbanks Jewellers, 1209 Douglas.

Staff Sgt. Gordon Bennett of the Victoria city police detective branch said Thursday the arrest was made Wednesday by five officers, two from Victoria, one RCMP member from the Colwood detachment and two drug squad officers from the RCMP. The officers stopped a car containing four persons apparently heading for the Swartz Bay terminal of B.C. Ferries.

Gordon James Campbell, 2110 Spring, Saanich, was handed a suspended sentence, six month's probation and ordered to do 75 hours of community service work by Ostler.

Defence lawyer Jeffery Green requested a change in election from trial by judge and jury to trial by magistrate alone before entering a guilty plea to a December, 1975, charge of possession of stolen goods.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court some jewelry was taken in a Victoria break-in of a house by persons other than Campbell. However, in January, 1976, Campbell admitted having some of the stolen jewelry in a safety-deposit box.

Green told the court that Campbell, who operated an amusement arcade in Saanich, bought the goods from juveniles.

Ostler rejected the submission that Campbell was naive, suggesting the better word might be opportunistic," in denying Green's request for an absolute or conditional discharge.

Green told the judge his client was facing a number of operations resulting from a head-on car crash in August. Campbell, he said, was receiving $50-a-week benefits from the Insurnace Corporation of B.C.'s no-fault fund.

A 21-year-old Wilkinson Road inmate pleaded guilty to two charges of possession of stolen credit cards and was remanded until Dec. 17 for sentencing.

Donald Lloyd Klepack, back in jail for parole violation, pleaded guilty to the Nov. 3 charges made in Sidney.

Mulligan entered a stay of proceedings on two charges of possession of stolen property following the guilty plea.

Defence-lawyer Green asked for the remand because a medical report was expected soon on Klepack which may become part of the defence's submission prior to sentencing.

Being unlawfully at large netted an 18-year-old Port Alberni man one extra month in jail.

Frederick Gerald Peters, serving time in Wilkinson Road jail for possession of stolen property, pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large Nov. 28 and received the additional sentence from Ostler.

Defence lawyer Gordon Macdonald told the court that Peters learned of the accidental death of a cousin and boyhood friend and went to Port Alberni to attend the funeral.

Macdonald said that although his client was on a weekend pass, he neglected to tell authorities why he was going so far and was arrested on his way back from the funeral.

Ostler, noting that the public was getting disenchanted with the temporary pass program, said that if Peters had told authorities of the funeral he would have been allowed to go.

Stealing a fire extinguisher and two stop blocks from a B.C. Ferries vessel Nov. 22 cost a Saanich man $250.

James Louis Code, 25, of 2226 Shelbourne pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and was given the fine or, in default, one month in jail.

Mulligan told the court the extinguisher and blocks were found in a van owned by Code, who was under the influence of alcohol at the time.

Two youths were remanded to Dec. 16 for plea on a number of charges laid in connection with Nov. 28 incidents in Saanich.

Michael Roland Graff, 17, 3864 Douglas, is charged with leaving the scene of an accident, theft of scales from the Greater Victoria school board, possession of stolen property and possession of a prohibited weapon.

He and Daniel John MacDonald, 18, 750 Daisy, are jointly charged with making a false report of auto theft.

Core studies reaction favorable

Reaction from school boards to core curriculum goals enunciated by the education ministry this week were mildly favorable, but most spokesmen say they want to see how the department will implement and finance the program.

The lively green booklet issued by the ministry titled What Should Our Children Be Learning? actually contains the "must" portion of Education Minister Pat McGeer's statement in November that school programs should fall into three categories — that which must be learned, that which should be learned, and that which may be learned.

It outlines goals for language, measurement and computation, science, and cultural and physical heritage courses, as well as problem-solving abilities.

Dr. Gerry Kristianson, chairman of the Saanich school board, said his district has been heading toward high-quality basic education for some time, and the success of the district in exceeding the provincial average in recent language arts assessment tests should indicate that the program is working.

He warned that establishing a core curriculum for pupils did not guarantee they would learn them. "We still need good teachers who are dedicated to the same goals."

Kristianson was pleased with a statement in the booklet that "each teacher, no matter what his or her subject specialty, is responsible for maintaining and developing the skills of reading, writing, listening and speaking."

"Students learn a lot of things from teachers," Kristianson said. "It is the responsibility of the teacher to see that they learn language skills in a history class, and not just in their language arts courses."

Kristianson called for greater emphasis on environmental education. "It is briefly mentioned in the booklet, but I think it is reaching the point where today environmental knowledge is becoming as important as being able to read."

He was amused by a statement in the booklet that junior secondary students should learn "to complete accurately forms such as business forms, application forms, tax forms . . ."

"I know people with university degrees who can't figure out their tax forms. Perhaps Dr. McGeer knows something about taxes we don't know."

One point that appeared to be missing in the program is a second language, Kristianson said. "We're spending a lot of money here and in Victoria to teach kids a second language. I'm wondering why there is no mention of it in here."

Kristianson said the booklet should receive wider circulation, beyond people directly involved with the school system, and out to parents and the community.

Saanich school trustee Rubymay Parrott, who sat on a core curriculum committee under the NDP government, welcomed the statement of goals as an important step in defining an educational direction for the province.

She said the core curriculum would provide an important common thread for students attending schools in different parts of the province.

Horst Doniecki, chairman of the Sooke school board, said he had not seen the core curriculum yet, but was pleased to see greater emphasis on basic education which he said had been neglected in the past.

Greater Victoria school board chairman William Ross said he has not studied the booklet enough to comment.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association president Walter Kitley praised the concept of involving the community in discussion of basic goals for education.

But, he said, the goals were "a bit vague" and would require closer definition before they could be useful in the classroom.

Blacks protest police killing

NEW YORK (UPI) — A group representing 1,700 black New York City policemen has voted to withdraw from the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to protest the union's support for a white cop who shot a black youth.

A spokesperson for the Guardian's Association said Wednesday the group voted unanimously late Tuesday to withdraw.

OSLO (Reuter) — The Norwegian government said Tuesday it will seize any foreign trawler that violates fishing regulations to be introduced when Norway sets up a 200-mile economic zone at the beginning of next year.

The number of foreign trawlers allowed to fish the zone will be cut and they will have to use nets approved by Norwegian authorities.

Conserve resources author's plea

'Money must stop calling tune all the time'

by STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

The author of Jean Pauline: An Indian Tragedy is making a plea to white people to "wake up before it's too late."

Campbell River's Maud Emery, author of A Seagull's Cry and the recently-completed Jean Pauline, was in Victoria Tuesday among the crowds and bright lights of a culture she believes is headed the wrong way.

"In Jean Pauline I am making an appeal for stricter conservation of our resources. This is something our modern culture hasn't had. Money calls the tune every time," she said.

In her book the domineering attitude of trapper Burns towards animals is the attitude of the modern culture toward nature. That is part of the tragedy of Jean Pauline: An Indian Tragedy. It's a tragedy for all of us.

We read: "The trap was then baited with fresh alder sticks, and the pole thrust in the water. In trying to reach the fresh food, the beaver is caught and drowns.

"It didn't matter to a man like Joe Burns that the female beaver is heavy with her young and soon to give birth; that she is busy preparing for their arrival by cutting birch and alder sticks into small lengths and carrying them into the lodge where with her sharp teeth she splits them into long soft fibres to be used for bedding for her new kittens.

"It didn't matter to Joe Burns and other trappers that the domestic life inside the lodge is much like their own, with both parents caring for the young, teaching and loving them, talking to them in soft, caressing sounds, or scolding in louder tones."

The young native woman, Jean Pauline, commits crimes in the forest that hit at white urban society — she springs steel-jaw traps.

Every time the powerful jaws of a trap smash harmlessly together, profits to the white trapper and the wealthy city furrier are lost. Another pelt on the fur coat of an upper-class customer is reclaimed by nature.

Maud Emery
. . . tragedy for all

The fact that an animal (beaver, fox, deer or any creature that may walk or fly into a leg-hold trap) is saved from drowning or excruciating pain before death means nothing. The crime against money is unforgivable in civilized white society.

And so is breaking the rules. When Jean Pauline kills a deer out of season to feed her hungry family, the game warden is furious.

That these crimes are committed by a woman, and a native woman at that, only compounds their seriousness in the eyes of the law.

Jean Pauline starts out in search of her roots and never looks back.

The search leads her to the realization that nature is the only wealth. The trapper and the game warden are on another trip. Jean Pauline meets with their violence.

The trapper calls her a "bitch," a "wild-cat," and a "female wolverine," Like the animals, Jean Pauline becomes a victim of the law which give man "dominion . . . over all the earth."

Jean Pauline survives the early humilations of school, scorns welfare, stands up to an intimidating game warden (who may be a classic example of the ugly Canadian bureaucrat), and fist-fights the trapper Burns for her right as a woman to be left alone.

And instead of the Indian agent converting Jean Pauline, she converts him.

"You're handicapped," she tells him. "You haven't quite the same common sense as an animal. He adapts to nature; he doesn't try to adapt nature to him."

As Douglas Street cars honked in the backgrond in rush hour Mrs. Emery said she was tired of reading books on native people that had a "discouraging view" of Indians.

"I decided to take the opposite view," she said. "I am hopeful that native people will preserve their country to hand down to their children."

Mrs. Emery was born in Burnaby and spent a few years of her youth in New Zealand. She grew up in B.C. and today is a frequent contributor to the Colonist's Islander magainze.

She said she originally wrote the book as a television play. She still may submit it to CBC.

The native and non-native cultures meet in her book in the persons of Jean Pauline and the Indian agent.

"You should have been born an Indian . . . I wonder how or why your troubled soul found its way to white parents," Jean Pauline tells the agent.

His reply: "I don't know, Jean Pauline, for surely a soul has no color. Perhaps it knew we'd . . . work out something together that would make this world a better place for us all."

Mrs. Emery is not optimistic about conservation of northern resources, or a fair hearing for native land claims. She said; "I wonder that the Berger Commission (studying the impact of pipeline construction) will say, and whether it will even be listened to."

"They'll probably go ahead with oil drilling regardless, convincing us it will create jobs when it actually is taking native lands away," she said.

U.S. passport plan rejected

WASHINGTON (AP)— The idea of requiring United States residents to carry a so-called internal passport was rejected again Tuesday in the final report of a federal body which had investigated the growing criminal use of false identification.

The Federal Advisory Committee on False Identification said it is convinced that any national identity-card system might make the problem worse.

Women 'mourn' rights code

While some celebrate today as Human Rights Day, some Victoria women are observing a day of mourning for the provincial Human Rights Code.

The Victoria Status of Women has joined the Vancouver Status of Women Action Group in calling for a province-wide day of mourning for the code, and women are asked to tell their provincial representatives to raise the issue in the Legislature.

"The unsatisfactory outcome of many human rights cases and the refusal of this government to set up boards of inquiry make a mockery of human rights in B.C.," Status of Women spokesman Mimi Robertson said.

"The government is rendering the human rights branch ineffective by ensuring that it is understaffed, overworked and under-funded," she said.

At the moment, she said, there were only eight human rights officers in the province, and the majority of cases have to be handled by industrial relations officers from the labor standards branch.

"They have no training in this area and are so overworked in their own field they can't get around to the human rights work."

Ms. Robertson said the situation was unfair to the officers as well as to people with complaints.

Last year, she said, 25 human rights cases were referred to the labor minister who set up 25 boards of inquiry.

So far this year 26 cases have been referred to the minister and only seven boards have been set up.

"Some cases have faced delays of up to 10 months for hearing."

The women's groups, she said, want a provision that boards of inquiry be set up for all cases referred to the minister, and time limits set for each step of complaints.

Special blood clinic set

An appeal has been made to blood donors to help meet a shortage.

A new clinic sponsored by Venture Search and Rescue has been arranged for Tuesday at St. Aidan's hall, 1691 Broadmead.

Demands for blood have exceeded expectations this year and "the best that can be done to stem the shortfall is to appeal to everyone who has been putting it off to come to one of the five clinics this month," an official said Thursday.

The December clinics are: Monday, Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 to 8 p.m., Tuesday, St. Aidan's hall 2 to 7 p.m., Wednesday, HMCS Naden, building 33, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; Thursday and next Friday, Newcombe auditorium, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

More shows axed at NBC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The number of weekly programs NBC has cancelled rose to five this week as the network confirmed industry reports it is dropping Quest and Serpico from its evening schedule.

NBC said earlier it had cancelled Dick Van Dyke's comedy-variety series, having just previously dropped Gemini Man and NBC's Wednesday night TV movie series. All five cancelled series were in their first season on television and had low ratings.

A spokesman for the network here said replacement shows for Quest, a western, Serpico, a police series, and Van Dyke and Company will be announced later.

PM pledges TV ruling

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he would ask premiers at the beginning of a first ministers' conference whether they wanted to open the meeting to the public and the press.

But he suggested premiers would likely move to keep their sessions private to facilitate talks on federal-provincial financial sharing arrangements.

Tory Flora MacDonald said only four of the 10 provincial premiers want to keep the public out of the meeting.

Never again – Cash after TV show cut

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Cash said his network special late Monday was "the worst in the history of television" and he vowed to end his television career.

"I'm through with television," he told a reporter. "I've had it."

He said the CBS show, The Johnny Cash Christmas Special, projected a false image of him.

When asked for clarification about the false image, Cash's sister, Reba Hancock, said: "He's especially concerned that they cut some of the closing hymn—Silent Night — and the part where most of the family was introduced."

Cash had a network variety show about seven years ago but became disillusioned about the way show executives wanted it handled.

Cut 'unlimited' authority of WCB chairman—Ross

The provincial government has been advised to strip the chairman of the Workers' Compensation Board of statutory powers which gave him "virtually unlimited authority."

Last full-time chairman of the board was T. G. Ison, who resigned earlier this year. Since then the board has been operating with a temporary chairman and the normal board of commissioners.

The P. S. Ross report on the WCB recommends that in the near future legislation be changed to permit the WCB to operate with the chairman responsible to a board of directors appointed by the government.

It warns that should such a board of directors be appointed, care should be exercised in the selection of men and women of "complete integrity and obvious competency," with political appointees avoided.

The change is needed "because of the style of the previous chairman and the powers granted him by legislation," the report states.

Under that system "the chairman's role became an almost all-powerful one with virtually unlimited authority in many areas of the board's operations.

"In our view it is entirely inappropriate to give one individual full authority with only partial responsibility. While the chairman has full powers for authorizing expenditures, he is not responsible for providing the funds expended, except to increase levies on outside sources (employers)."

The report claims that Ison "placed a high priority on initiating new programs and improving services to the neglect of cost considerations." And it adds: "It is quite possible that another chairman could move to the extreme in coost control to the neglect of benefits and services to claimants."

Under Ison, the report claims, the two commissioners on the board were under-used. "The chairman personally took responsibility for policy and planning matters and review of board's of review decisions was kept to a minimum."

Offering two ways out, the report recommends that the government either make the WCB directly responsible to the labor minister or establish a board of directors.

"Decrease the reliance on a single individual by establishing a board of directors to whom the chairman is accountable and supplement this with a requirement to submit annual plans, budgets and quarterly statements of operating expenses to the minister of labor," the report states. It adds that it endorses the latter proposal.

"The immediate task of bringing WCB administrative expenses into line is a large and complex project," the report states. "We suggest that a well-organized comprehensive cost reduction effort be a high priority for the new chairman."

Two studies cost $110,000

Two separate reports dealing with the operations of the Workers' Compensation Board will cost B.C. taxpayers a total of $110,000.

The reports, which followed inquiries by separate Vancouver firms, were made public Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Costlier of the two, according to government figures, was a $65,000 inquiry by Eckler, Brown, Segal and Co. Ltd., into actuarial aspects of the WCB. The report by P. S. Ross and Partners on WCB organization and administration carries a $45,000 pricetag. Both were ordered by the present government.

New WCB act

Williams wants autonomy preserved

Labor Minister Allan Williams promised Thursday that legislation would be introduced next spring based on the P.S. Ross report on the Workers' Compensation Board, but declined to say what aspects it would cover.

He did promise that it would not impair the independence of the WCB from government.

Williams said that in reviewing the recommendations, it had occurred to him that some members of the public might interpret them as urging the government to exercise a greater degree of authority over the affairs of the board.

"I wish to make it clear that any recommendations which I may make to the government in this respect will be made with the objectives of enhancing the ability of the WCB to discharge its responsibilities while, at the same time, preserving the independence from government which has been recognized as an essential element in the fulfilment of its role."

Williams said he intended to follow the same lines in reviewing future operations of boards of appeal — appeal boards from decisions of the WCB.

"I am reviewing the existing legislation to determine how the government can best ensure the independence of the boards as appellate bodies, while at the same time achieving the superior level of competence that such independence demands."

The minister said he expected to be naming a new administrative chairman of the review boards withing the next few days and shortly after would announce a new chief executive officer for the WCB.

The Ross report notes a serious "spirit of antagonism" between the WCB and review boards. "Largely this results from different viewpoints or judgments on the same issues by the WCB commissioners and the boards of review."

Asked if he was surprised at the findings of the Ross investigators, Williams said he had been aware for some time of the dissatisfactions within the WCB organization and the declining morale.

"This report is something on which we can make an assessment and act," he said.

Williams said he placed the responsibility for the mess the WCB was now in at the feet of government.

"And I mean all governments, over the years," he said." Not any specific government. Obviously government should have paid more aatention that it did."

Assessments too low, tables faulty

Bad math results in deficit

The Workers' Compensation Board traded a surplus position for a whopping deficit over a five-year period because of some bad calculations.

Beyond this, the WCB balance sheet leaves something to be desired, and the declared $114 million deficit should actually read $188 million.

These are among the findings of Eckler, Brown, Segal and Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, commissioned at a cost of $65,000 to make a report on the actuarial aspects of the board.

The report was released Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams, along with a second report by P.S. Ross and Partners — a Vancouver firm that found fault with the organization and administration of the WCB.

The actuarial report also finds "liberalizations" in claims adjudication practices — including decisions of the commissioners — have had a significant impact on WCB finances.

"We do not feel competent to judge whether or not these liberalizations were justified by the use of too restrictive policies in the past," the report says.

Reasons given for the spectacular change in the financial picture between 1971 and the end of 1975:

- Assessment rate increases made as the result of 1974 amendments to the Workers' Compensation Act were inadequate;
- Money set aside each year for incomplete claims and pension funds has fallen short of the need. This was blamed on using statistics from too long a time period, and underestimating the rise in the consumer price index when calculating the liability for pensions.

In dealing with the report, the labor minister said assessments might have to be increased to make up the losses. However, he didn't see this as the best way of solving the financial problems.

"In the past that has been the system, just to put up the assessments," said Williams. "But that isn't the way."

He said his department was discussing the matter with the finance department to ascertain if the government should make some special payments.

The report suggests that the time might have arrived for the board to break away from the usual provincial policy of investing in major public sector pension funds, such as municipal, teachers' and public service superannuation plans.

It says higher yields could be obtained from dealing in mortgages and high-grade corporate bonds.

"Because British Columbia employers finance the board through their assessment payments, any improvement in investment yield would reduce their costs," the report says.

The report also concludes that certain liabilities haven't been listed as they should be on the balance sheets.

Falling dollar won't affect food in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The value decline of the Canadian dollar will have little or no effect on the price of fresh produce in B.C., spokesmen for the province's major food outlets said this week.

The dollar's drop in value was blamed by the Ontario food terminal for an expected six-to-eight-per-cent jump by week's end in eastern Canada fresh produce prices.

A decline in purchasing power and new exchange rates on transportation costs for produce imports were cited as the main factors in Ontario's markup.

But Cyril Keetch, Woodward's grocery manager, said B.C. consumers can rest easy for the time being.

"God is the main factor in our produce prices because everything depends on the weather," Veetch said.

"Ontario's transportation costs are higher than B.C.'s because they bring in produce from places like Florida, Texas and California while we import mainly from Mexico and California. The distances are different."

Canada Safeway spokesman Marilyn Chilvers said produce prices were subject to constant fluctuations but agreed that weather conditions were a stronger factor than the value of the Canadian dollar.

"If it rains in California we might see the effect," she said.

Tiny boy earned respect in thefts

CHELMSFORD, England (UPI) — A tiny 14-year-old boy nicknamed "The Master" was sentenced this week to three months in a juvenile home for having stolen nearly $8,000 from chain stores cash registers.

The four foot-six-inch boy pleaded guilty at Chelmsford juvenile court to stealing $1,121 from one department store and admitted to 22 other offences involving more than $6,400.

The boy's defence lawyer, Bill Brown, told the court "The Master" made his hauls during regular business hours with staff and customers present.

He used wire cutters to ship keys from chains around supervisors' waists and frequently had to connect electricity to unattended cash registers before he could get cash out, Brown said.

The boy was sentenced to three months in a juvenile home. A 14-year-old accomplice was placed in the care of his hometown juvenile council.

Brown told the court "The Master" showed little remorse for his thefts and had attracted the approval and adulation of other youths in his London neighborhood.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Once we get into the month of December, I always notice a distinct change in the tone of the letters that reach my desk. Rather than requests for help in the treatment of some sick plant or tree, the average letter is from some sweet young thing who wants to know what on earth she can buy for her husband or relative who happens to have gone crackers over the hobby of gardening.

Even more often, it is the other way around, with a distraught husband seeking some idea as to what would ring the bell with his hoe-happy wife.

These are not easy letters to answer, for a lot of the things an avid gardener longs for in his inner heart are not exactly the type of present you could gift-wrap and stash away under the Christmas tree.

A big truckload of mellow old rotted manure, for instance, or a long-handled, pointed-nose shovel!

In wandering aimlessly through the stores, though, and in browsing through garden magazine ads and catalogues, I have run across a few odds and ends I could wish someone would put in MY stocking, and I am listing a few of these in the hope of providing some guidance for these puzzled Christmas shoppers.

One problem that must be faced by every gardener, novice and expert alike, is how to tell when your plants need water, and in the case of indoor potted plants, I would venture a guess that more are lost through over-watering than through any other cause. Old-time professionals had many tricks for checking — by feeling the soil, by hefting the weight of the pot in the hand, by the "ring" of the pot when rapped — but for the novice, there is an inexpensive gadget that takes all the guesswork out of watering.

It is called the Green Thumb Plant Communicator, and it is certainly well named. It looks rather like a giant hairpin, about a foot long, with two probes which are pushed into the soil of the plant being tested, whereupon the thing emits clicks like a Geiger counter used for detecting radiation.

If the clicks come slowly or not at all, your plant is dry and needs water. If close together, the soil is too wet, and if the clicks blend together into a buzz or a whine, chances are the plant has been given an overdose of fertilizer.

The Green Thumb Plant Communicator comes in two models; one has plastic-coated probes at $10.95 and one with stainless steel probes sells for $12.95. In my opinion, the latter is well worth the small extra charge.

Full instructions come with the gadget, and it comes complete with battery.

Another gift which should gladden the heart of any serious gardener is the Green Valley Soil Test Kit, which I saw priced at $14.95; this is considerably less than I paid for a similar kit some 10 years ago.

With this, one can take a sample of soil and test it chemically for shortages of nitrogen, phosphate, potash and lime, all without any knowledge or experience in chemistry. The kit contains enough material to perform about 20 tests, and replacement chemicals are available at a very low price — only $1.75 for the whole set. Again, complete instructions come with the kit.

Another simple kit measures only the acid-alkaline balance of your soil — whether or not it needs lime. This is the Sudbury pH Tester, $4.29.

Growing herbs indoors is getting to be quite a fad these days, and the latest gimmick is to grow them in hanging pots rather than cluttering up the windowsills. In one store I saw kits neatly packaged for this purpose, each carton containing a terra cotta pot, a soil-less growing mixture, rope hanger and seeds of one herb.

Available were mint, dill, mustard, thyme, chives and parsley. I forgot to make a note of the price, but I think the kits sold for around $4 each.

For stocking stuffers I saw some black plastic pot hangers at 95 cents each, used for hanging flower pots on walls, posts, fences and the like.

I have been using some of the cheaper metal kinds, and while these are very good for the older and thicker clay flower pots, they are not too satisfactory with the modern plastic plant containers.

Jack Smith

As a television football fan I am not insensitive to the disdain in which we are held by critics of the sport. No one likes to be thought of as a slob.

Yet I can certainly sympathize with Mickey Ziffren of Malibu, Calif., whose diatribe against the cultural phenomenon known as Monday Night Football as published recently in The Los Angeles Times. It must be agonizing for a woman who doesn't like football to have Howard Cosell in her house for three hours every week, not to mention the shrill and gutteral responses of a husband who must seem, for the time being, possessed, and perhaps is.

However, Mrs. Ziffren and most of the others are not content merely to say they hate football; they go on to condemn it for the wrong reasons. They pile it on. In football, that is known as unsportsmanlike conduct — an illegal hit — and it calls for a penalty.

Mrs. Ziffren, for example, complains that entertaining on Monday night is no longer among a woman's options, because Monday night is "zoo night," when her husband returns to the jungle. Surely she is disingenuous here. If Mrs. Ziffren really is given to entertaining on Monday night she must be known among her friends as the Monday Night Nemesis of Malibu. In most homes Monday is a night on which husbands crawl home with barely enough strength left to mix a martini and none for scintillating table talk.

But there's no point in resenting Mrs. Ziffren's broadside. Her hatred is evidently genuine, and her anger needs an outlet. I am far more concerned by an attack from William A. Caldwell, retired associate editor and columnist of the Hackensack, (N.J.) Record, for he is the unkindest critic of all — a turncoat, a former television football fan who has abandoneed the game and gone outdoors.

In a recent essay for the Edgerton (Mass.) Vineyard Gazette, Caldwell writes of a Sunday afternoon on which he and his wife went berrypicking on Chappaquiddick, tromping through fields of goldenrod, dangling at the ends of creaking branches to reach for trusses of green grapes, and listening to the song of gray and yellow finches in the pine trees.

"... Instead of sprawling on the sofa in front of the tube and watching gangs of faceless ruffians commit assault and battery on each other hour after irretrievable hour," he says ... "Instead of squandering on the thugs in white shirts or the gorillas in red the emotional reserves one should hoard against any life's inevitable crises ..."

I know Caldwell is a wise and gentle man, as well as a skillful writer, but like the angry Mrs. Ziffren, he attacks football, it seems to me, for the wrong reasons: "It's not against football that I'm rebelling," he says. "It's against the proposition, expensively promoted by a conspiracy in which the media, including newspapers, take part, that watching football on television is fun. It isn't. Considering the absolutely predictable repetitiousness of the program, it is precisely as interesting as would be an endless rerun of Milton Berle or Hopalong Cassidy."

The truth is, on the contrary, that a football game is absolutely unpredictable; not only its outcome, but every play. The unfolding play between 22 men is so dynamic play. The unfollin gof a play and complex that never in the history of football, counting every game ever played, have there been two plays exactly alike.

One can go to the opera or the ballet for a lifetime without hoping for anything like the racking suspense of a last-minute touchdown drive — sometimes through rain or snow — when the game is in the balance. One can watch every move in "Swan Lake" year after year, without noticing a single variation, a single broken play, a single brilliant stroke of spontaneous improvisation.

How often has one prayed for Nureyev to miss a signal and turn his back as Fonteyn soars by and crashes in the orchestra. No such luck. The best one can hope for is a snapped garter or a thrown shoe.

Even the birds Caldwell finds so delightful in the woods are not more unpredictable than a soprano trilling through the bell song; in fact, there is a better chance the soprano will blow it than the bird. A quarterback as predictable as a nightingale wouldn't last two plays.

Caldwell, back in the woods again, enjoyed "a glint of egrets, in the swamp the harsh croak of a bittern, on the silence the murmur of drowsy bees, along the horizon the white moth wings of little boats standing out toward Nantucket ..."

Oh, I envy him that lovely day, all right. I would happily give up a Sunday morning to see a glint of egrets, a croak of bitterns, a murmur of bees; but I like television football as mush as birds, and I see no reason why a man should not enjoy both.

I am reminded that next Sunday morning they are holding the annual Jack Smith birdwalk at Descanso Gardens, 8 o'clock sharp, and I intend to be there, eyes and ears alert.

But I mean to be home again, don't you worry, by kickoff time. The Redskins are playing that gang of faceless ruffians in Dallas, and it won't be any spectre of a rose.

Sydney Harris

Thoughts at large:

● The irony of "recreational areas" is that, as long as we have to get to them by auto, we have to substitute large acres of parking pavement for the natural landscape we are seeking, and even more than that for access drives — so that such areas eventually expire from popularity.

● Stupid women nag, but smart ones have always known that silent reproach is the most effective treatment for male recalcitrance.

● Hard-liners fail to recognize that what prevents or reduces crime is a sense of community, and when this is low or absent, punitive actions do not serve as deterrents, but only inflame and enlarge resentments.

● Most things foreign are either respected or despised because they are foreign, and not for what they are in themselves.

● Instead of doling out funds indiscriminately, governments should devise a program of "incentives" for social policy — such as depositing state funds, on a preferential basis, with banks that adopt constructive lending policies, for students, for farmers or for slum housing.

● Lies kill love, no doubt; but no less does thoughtless candor.

● There are no "electorial" votes, for there is no "Electorial" College.

● Most people would say that when Robinson Crusoe came across Friday on the desert island, his "freedom" was abruptly cut in half; but they would be wrong, for Crusoe was neither free nor unfree when alone, but merely in a state of nature — since freedom is a social relation, not a personal attribute.

● The only possible justification for haste (except in an emergency) is to gain time for leisure.

● John Burroughs, the naturalist, put the above thought more graphically when he said: "We can outrun the wind and the storm, but we cannot outrun the demon of Hurry."

● The most important lesson science has learned in our century is to be skeptical of its own conclusions, for we now know that the mind "preprocesses" raw data to make them conform to our conception of "reality."

● It is worth reflecting that the only sports today that are not commercialized and professionalized are those that began as work — namely, hunting and fishing, from which men eked out a precarious living.

● The greatest fault of creative writers as they get older is that they begin to plagiarize from themselves, and not always successfully.

● There are people so perverted that they would rather appear to be happy than be so.

HOLLYWOOD — Anson Williams the Potsie of "Happy Days" flew in relatives from all over the country for a birthday party he gave his 82-yearpold grandfather earlier this week.

The party was held December 5 at Pike's Verdugo Inn in Glendale where Anson lives. About 50 people were there. Still trying to find out if he invited The Fonz.

Always like to write about comic Joe Besser's anniversary because his wife's name if Ernie. They celebrated their 44th the other day.

Joe was working in The Passing Show of 1932 on Broadway, when he married Ernie, who was a dancer with the Allan K. Foster Girls. She's the first girl I ever knew named Ernie. Once knew one in Paris named Claude.

Sarah Miles is a real character. She tried to talk Lord Lawrence Olivier into doing a Japanese porno picture.

"It's time you do something like that," said Sarah to the world's greatest actor.

"Is it now?" said Lord Larry unenthusiastically.

Clint Eastwood sneaked his third Dirty Harry film, The Enforcer, in San Jose the other night and got rave reviews, one undeserved.

One card praised Clint's direction of the film which came as a surprise to Jim Fargo who is making his dirrectorial debut on the film. Jim has been Clint's assistant on four films the superstar had directed.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Cowichan study:

Young people face stark jobs reality

By CRAIG MEREDITH

DUNCAN — There are more people in the under-25 age bracket who are unemployed than employed in Cowichan Valley, according to the preliminary results of a study being conducted for Canada Manpower.

Steve Torrence, who has been working on the study in Duncan on a part-time basis since early October, told the Colonist Wednesday that final numerical results and recommendations would not be available until late January.

"But this is the indication we have received so far for employables in the under-25-year-old group — there is a very severe unemployment situation for this age group in the Cowichan Valley," he stated.

Torrence was asked by the Duncan Canada Manpower office in September to analyse the severity of employment problems for people under 25, and to determine the effectiveness of Canada Manpower in closing the gap between needs and services.

The Duncan Manpower manager, John McCuloch, said he made this request because his office was becoming concerned about what was happening to students who had been leaving school in the past few years.

"They just weren't showing up on our files, and we were finding this quite unusual considering the employment situation here in the last two years," the Manpower manager said, indicating the overall figure for unemployment had been fluctuating between 15-and-20 per cent.

Since the Manpower consultant has begun travelling from Victoria to Duncan two or three days a week to conduct the study, he has set up a nine-member community advisory group and distributed more than 200 three-page questionnaires to those in the under-25 age bracket.

Torrence said the members of the committee were selected to represent a cross-section of the Cowichan Valley.

Included is a representative from a major employer, a union, the Cowichan Indian band, high school students, teachers, department of human resources, and other community groups.

Through these members and other local agencies, the questionnaires have been circulated and information is being gathered to analyse the problem.

Before Torrence's final report is made public, it will be referred to the committee for its perusal and recommendations.

From the survey results received so far, the consultant said, if he was under 25, he would not rely completely on Canada Manpower assistance to find a job.

"Manpower can assist in preparing the individual on how to seek employment, but the vast majority of those surveyed expect us to have every job listed, which unfortunately is not the case," Torrence said.

Another major problem, he said, was the student reliance on their parents for advice on how to get a job.

"Chances are their parents have had their present employment position for a number of years. The situation in most cases for their parents, when they were first seeking employment, is not comparable to the present labor market."

Because of the under-25 group's reliance on their parents, the Manpower consultant suggested, one of the biggest tasks may be educating the parents.

What does he personally recommend to the unemployed individual who recently left school?

"Because the unskilled person is a dying commodity, I would suggest that each individual seeking employment not underestimate their hobbies or voluntary work, seek professional assistance on job-seeking methods, and most important, be aggressive," Torrence said.

Information from the survey is currently being put together, but the Manpower consultant said he would still welcome any questions or advice the public could give him.

Sovereign awards

Norcliffe selected top horse of '76

TORONTO (CP) — Norcliffe, winner of this year's Queen's Plate has been named Canada's 1976 horse of the year in a poll conducted by the Daily Racing Form. The three-year-old colt, owned by Charles Baker, chairman of the Ontario Jockey Club received 16 of 21 votes with the other five going to Victorian Prince.

Norcliffe also got all 21 votes in the category for three-year-old colts and geldings while six-year-old Victorian Prince, owned by the Grovetree S table and B.C. Stable, was named champion older horse and top grass competitor.

This year the racing form's poll was combined with the Sovereign Awards, instituted earlier this year to honor the top Canadian-bred thoroughbreds. The selectors from across Canada included racing writers, editors, commentators, columnists and racing specialists.

Norcliffe had eight victories in 14 starts this year and earnings of $215,626. He won two legs of Ontario's triple crown — the Queen's Plate and Prince of Wales Stakes — along with a 4½-length triumph in the $75,000-added Carling O'Keefe Invitational Handicap.

Sound Reason, owned by Stafford Farms of King, Ont., was a unanimous choice as top two-year-old; Northernette, owned by Syl Asadorian and Sam Cosention of Toronto, was voted best two-year-old filly; Conn Smythe's Canadian Oaks winner Bye Bye Paris was selected as the top three-year-old filly and Momigi, owned by Koichio Hayata of Japan, was named as the top older filly or mare.

Norcliffe, a son of Buckpasser from Drama School, was purchased as a yearling for $80,000 at Saratoga, N.Y. He has 11 victories in 21 lifetime starts and earnings of $325,862.

It is the third consecutive year a son of Buckpasser has been named Canadian horse of the year. L-Enjoleur, by Buckpasser from Fanfreluche, won in 1974 and 1975. La Prevoyante, a daughter of Buckpasser, was horse of the year in 1972.

Victorian Prince, who won a number of races this year in the United States including the $100,000-added Arlington Hanidcap in Chicago, has 1976 earnings of $194,585 for owners Jim Black, Kevin Besley and Michael Clay.

Former Argonaut gets Raider chance

OAKLAND (AP) — Quarterback Ken Stabler will sit out the Oakland Raiders' final regular-season game while Mike Rae handles the passing, coach John Madden has announced.

He added that Stabler, the National Football League's leading passer, grudgingly accepted the decision.

"Of course, he'd like to play. He's a competitor. That's one reason he's a great quarterback."

Rae, a University of Southern California product who played three years in the Canadian Football League with Toronto Argonauts, started against Houston early this season when Stabler had a sore knee. The Raiders won 14-13, with Rae throwing two touchdown passes.

But the backup quarterback has played very little since then, and Madden said: "It's important not to go to the playoffs with a situation where our backup quarterback hasn't played in two months."

Bruins add Dan Lucas

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — New Westminster Bruins have added winger Danny Lucas of the University of British Columbia to their lineup for an international exhibition game Sunday against Moscow Selects in Vancouver.

Lucas, 18, scored 57 goals two seasons ago for Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League. He quit the junior team last Christmas in a dispute with coach Pat Ginnell and has been playing college hockey this season for UBC.

Tigers' Bird honored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I don't know what I'm doing up here. I'm working at a gas station and a guy hands me a piece of paper and says do you want to play baseball?"

Mark "The Bird Fidrych" made his remarks Thursday night at a banquet where the Detroit Tigers pitcher was being honored as Man of the Year by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Fidrych received the award not only for winning 19 games and rookie of the year honors, but for his mound antics and winning the adulation of fans across America.

Park hurting

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Bruins recalled defenceman Joe Zanussi Thursday from Rochester of the American Hockey League to replace injured Brad Park. Park has a back muscle injury and is a doubtful participant in the Bruins' games Saturday in Philadelphia and Sunday at home against Detroit.

'No formal planning approach, no budgetary control system'

WCB management scorched in report

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

A devastating indictment of middle and top management at the Workers' Compensation Board was made public Thursday.

In preparation since January, the report prepared by P. S. Ross and Partners, a management consultant firm, states the WCB between 1971 and the present had "no formal planning approach, no budgetary control system, an inadequate management information system and a lack of organizational clarity."

And the people running the $141 million operation were, at the middle-management level, "seriously weakened, and top management reportedly has operated in an authoritarian, elitist and secretive manner."

Rehabilitation praised

Only the rehabilitation branch of the operation comes out of the investigation with words of praise. The report states that morale was high in that section, the operation reasonably well run and the results of their work satisfactory.

While all aspects of the WCB operation come under critical fire, some of the harshest words are reserved for the board's data-processing department operating with all the latest electronic aids and IBM computers.

The Ross report says bluntly: "The over-all picture is one of much hardware working long hours to produce only the most rudimentary information."

While noting that the data-processing department had attempted to apply "appropriate tools-of-the-trade" in its operation, the report says it hadn't been successful in utilizing those tools.

Staff, costs soaring

In addition to the hardware, "the department on two occasions within the past year has retained the services of IBM to monitor the functioning of its computer system with the idea of improving terminal response time . . . in spite of these efforts, the impression remains that the productivity of the system and of the department as a whole, is distinctly low. This was particularly noticeable on the hardware side where, during one 10-minute period in the computer room . . . sufficient productivity could not be mustered from the remaining sources to print more than two lines on the high-speed printer."

Using 1971 as a base year, the report reveals that the

Highlights

- The Workers' Compensation Board should enter its next fiscal year with a well-planned budget incorporating a hard comprehensive analysis of proposed new or expanded programs;
- A management system should be develped to provide accurate, meaningful, timely information on indicators of performance other than budgets;
- Decrease full authority of the board chairman by establishing a board of directors to whom the chairman would be accountable, with a requirement to submit annual plans, budgets and quarterly statements of operating expense to the labor minister;
- Maintenance of the present basic role of the board comprising claims adjudication and payment, medical and vocational rehabilitation, accident prevention, industrial hygiene and first aid training;
- A formalized system of long-range planning;
- A well-organized comprehensive cost reduction program covering all areas of the board's operations.

132,000 in danger of hearing damage

Of a workforce of 850,000 people in potentially-noisy environments in B.C., 132,000 are considered in danger of suffering hearing damage.

And the P.S. Ross report on the Workers' Compensation Board states that of that total between 13,000 and 20,000 will probably finish up with claims for compensation.

Labor Minister Allan Williams agreed that hearing damage was of prime concern to his department and to the WCB "as are all job safety measures."

But he could offer no immediate relief to the situation other than to promise to keep studying ways and means of eliminating the hazard.

The Ross report recommends an early warning system for workers in noisy environments and suggests that preventive policy measures be stepped up.

Cullen
. . . saving to create jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bud Cullen introduced a bill Thursday that would cut about 50,000 claimants off the unemployment insurance rolls.

The amendment which would require claimants to work 12 weeks out of 52 before they qualify for benefits was immediately criticized by Andy Hogan (NDP—Cape Breton-East Richmond), who said it would have a devastating impact in areas of high unemployment.

"It's very damned hard for people in some areas to find work even for eight weeks out of the year — as incredible as that sounds to a person in Toronto," Hogan said in an interview after the bill was introduced in the Commons.

The bill likely will get a rough ride in the House because the proposal to extend the qualifying period to 12 weeks from the current eight weeks also has been criticized as too harsh by some Liberal backbenchers. On the other hand, some Conservative MPs say that even 12 weeks is too generous and the qualifying period should be even longer.

Cullen said savings resulting from tougher unemployment insurance regulations would be directed into job-creation projects in economically-depressed areas.

He said most of the 50,000 who would be affected by the extended qualifying period are not steady members of the permanent work force. They tend to be persons under 25 or housewives who work for small stretches to supplement their family income.

The bill would implement a number of measures outlined by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in his May budget speech.

It would merge the Unemployment Insurance Commission with the department of manpower and immigration. The new department would be called the department of employment and immigration and Cullen said the merger would enable the government to provide "one-stop service" for the unemployed.

In addition to toughening the qualifying period for the unemployment insurance benefits, the bill would tie special extended benefits to regional unemployment rates rather than the national rate. That would result in longer benefit periods in areas of high unemployment, such as the Atlantic provinces and parts of period in areas of relatively low unemployment, such as the Prairies.

The government also plans to link more closely the number of weeks during

Marchand named to Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Jean Marchand was installed as a senator Thursday, 45 days after declining a Senate seat to run unsuccessfully in the Nov. 15 Quebec election.

"I'm still alive enough to fight," he said as he left Parliament in October. Thursday, he returned and took a seat in the Upper Chamber, only a few hours after his friend and former cabinet colleague Prime Minister Trudeau announced his appointment.

Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Steuart, who will be replaced at a provincial leadership convention this weekend, was also named to the Senate.

The appointments fill two of 19 vacancies in the 104-seat Senate, and are likely to add a touch of spice to that chamber.

Both men are short and scrappy, and despite their vast differences in background, share gifts of wit and capacities for blunt, combative speech.

For Marchand, 57, the appointment comes at the end of a mercurial public career that spans 11 years in federal politics and three major cabinet portfolios.

Espionage hinted

Canada expels Soviet attache

OTTAWA (CP) — A member of the Soviet embassy has been asked to leave Canada because of activities incompatible with his diplomatic status.

The external affairs department said Thursday Maj. Vladimir Vassiliev, assistant air attache, has been declared persona non grata.

He is expected to be on his way home to the Soviet Union by the weekend.

External affairs officials said by long custom they do not release reasons for asking diplomats to leave.

About a year ago military officers' messes were warned about East European military attaches dropping in for drinks and picking up intelligence.

The last Communist to be expelled from Canada was a Chinese diplomat about two years ago.

Reports from the United States said he was taking money across the border to pass to people who eventually sent it to assist Philippines revolutionaries.

Pipeline secrecy attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Details of the proposed oil tanker port at Kitimat, should be open for public discussion, a spokesman for the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Thursday.

Gary Gallon criticized the federal transport ministry for withholding details and said the ministry seems "intent on making a decision without any public input.'

He said the ministry is entitled to withhold details, but thought it would discuss the matter in light of public concern that navigation in the area poses a serious threat of oil spills.

"It's a very bad political mistake on their part, but it's typical of the transport ministry not to involve the public, as we've seen with their proposals to extend Vancouver International Airport," Gallon said.

Kitimat Pipe Line Co. Ltd. applied Wednesday to the National Energy Board for permission to build a dock at Kitimat and a 753-mile pipeline to Edmonton.

The application was made public, but the transport ministry refused permission for the company to disclose its proposals for operation of the proposed port.

$6.6-million bungling not so awful—Andras

OTTAWA (CP) — The government bungled $6.6 million of the taxpayer's money away in the last year, Treasury Board President Robert Andras told the Commons Thursday, indicating he considered it a drop in the bucket.

Andras said his officials have calculated the maximum loss to the taxpayer from sloppy administration cited by the auditor-general at $6.6 million. He doubted whether it would ever be recovered.

Andras stressed that it was a small amount considering that the financial transactions — the cash flow — of all government departments, agencies, and corporations involved a total of $129 billion in 1975-1976. The actual spending was $33 billion.

"Let's keep it in perspective," Andras told Opposition MPs, criticizing them and the press for exaggerating the auditor-general's report which said the government has virtually lost control over spending.

The $6.6 million loss was only .00005 per cent or one-twenty thousandth of the total amount involved in government transactions, he said.

Andras was replying to a motion of non-confidence introduced by Conservative Leader Joe Clark who said the government has no control over spending and Parliament has no power to do anything about it. The motion was defeated.

"It is my contention that the government is in control of the public purse," Andras said, reminding the Commons that the government is still collecting taxes, paying interest on bonds and mailing out social security cheques every month.

Admitting there were several inadequacies in government administration that have caused losses, he added that Parliament does have the controlling power and will use its power to clean up the government's act.

Otherwise he couldn't understand "what in the devil we are doing here every day."

New prison study a waste – Barrett

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Dave Barrett, former premier of B.C. said Thursday studies on prison reform have been carried out since 1936 and the parliamentary committee now re-examining the question is wasting time.

Speaking to a political scienoe class at Acadia University, Barrett said the material compiled over the years contains recommendations for the kind of preventive work needed for protection of victims of crime and the security of prison staff.

However, these recommendations have not been carried out, he said.

"All we are now getting is another parliamentary committee to cover the same route . . ."

COLONIST 500 FUND

It's amazing when you think about it.

And doubly gratifying when you realize that the $130.72 for the Colonist 500 Fund from these kindergarten pupils was money they had raised themselves and didn't just bring from home.

Stan Turner, principal of Frank Hobbs elementary school, wrote that "the enclosed cheque for $130.72 was raised by the combined efforts of Mrs. Hoyte, our kindergarten teacher, and the children and parents of her two classes.

"They collected old toys and books and made candy; then they held a sale to which the other children in the school were invited. The kindergarten pupils acted as store clerks and enjoyed not only the raising of the money for a good cause, but a very worthwhile learning experience."

As the young pupils well know, all their money will go to help less-fortunate families enjoy a better Christmas.

Last year, more than $44,000 was collected for the 500 fund at the Colonist office, other businesses, and at Eaton's People Tree, standing once again in the Broad Street mall to accept donations.

Donations may be brought into the Colonist office at 2621 Douglas Street, or may be mailed to this address (postal code V8W 2N4).

WCB went into an upward spiral in staff and costs in 1972 and was dangerously close to being out of control by 1975.

At the end of 1972 there were 855 people on staff at the WCB. A year later total level stood at 908, an increase of 53 workers. By the end of 1974 staff had increased to 1,150, an increase for the year of 242, and by the end of last year staff had peaked to 1,347, an increase of another 197 people.

The Ross report says that the upward movement of staff "suggests a strategy of increased staffing, presumably based on the assumption that this would result in lower accident rates . . .

"Over an extended period of time . . . increases in preventive staff have not resulted in lower accident time-loss accidents. This can mean one of two things: Either increased regulation and education efforts by WCB represents an ineffective strategic choice, or the increased resources have not been applied effectively to activiters which pay off in fewer accidents."

The major portion of staff increases were in the accident prevention branch where salaries and benefits increased 69 per cent in the 1974-75 year and net expenses 67 per cent in the same period.

The report says that the staff expansion had not gone unnoticed by employers, nor had management in the private sector been unaware of WCB inefficiencies.

"Employer concerns that the WCB has extended its role too far into regulation and sanction and that increased regulatory emphasis and expenditure is not helping reduce accident rates," the report says.

"Unions are concerned that WCB inspectors are not taken seriously by employer management representatives, resulting in ineffective regulatory effort."

In layman's language the report outlines criticisms of WCB inspection services, with one company complaining that his plant was visited every three days for a month by one inspector while another company reported that on one occasion he had nine inspectors on a job site at the same time.

There have also been general complaints that the WCB has moved unnecessarily into competition with the volunteer St. John Ambulance Society.

"We offer the opinion . . . that wherever adequate service can be provided (in the teaching of first aid) by a voluntary agency such as St. John's, this service should be utilized."

The report says that while general morale of WCB workers is low, quick improvements could be made by a change in the attitude of management to rank and file employees.

Ex-pitcher dies at 68

SARATOSA (AP) — Wesley "Cheek" Ferrell, a 20-game winner twice in his 15-year major-league baseball pitching career, died Thursday in hospital at the age of 68. Ferrell's career included stints for Brooklyn Dodgers, Boston Braves, Boston Red Sox, Washington Senators, New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians beginning in 1927 and ending after the 1941 season. The Greensboro, N.C., native posted a 21-16 record for the Red Sox in 1935. He had been 20-22 for Cleveland in 1933. The right-hand hurler had an over-all major league record of 129-185.

which benefits may be collected and the number of weeks acautly worked.

The existing system gives persons who have worked 20 weeks an additional 18 benefits weeks, over and above the other benefits they are entitled to.

The proposed new law would basically give claimants one benefit week for every week worked, to a maximum of 25 weeks. In other words, a person who worked 12 weeks ould be entitled to benefits for a basic period of 12 eeks and a person who worked 25 weeks would be entitled to benefits for 25 weeks.

A person who worked more than 25 weeks would be entitled to a further benefit week for every two worked over 25 eeks, to a maximum of 13 benefit weeks. The bill also would entitle claimants to an additional 20 benefit weeks if unemployment in their region was higher than 8.6 per cent. They would be entitled to no regional benefits if the regional unemployment level was four per cent or less.

Your Good Health

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would appreciate your opinion about the extended use of the drug Azulfidine for a case of chronic colitis. I take five grams daily.

I have been told to increase the dosage when the colitis is severe. But since I have been taking it for a few years, the pharmacist questions whether my doctor still wants me to keep taking it.

Could this use have adverse effects? It gives me the feeling of being off balance at times. — Mrs. A. H.

Colitis (co-LITE-us) is inflammation of the large bowel. The drug you name is particularly effective in long-term treatment of this. Your dosage (five grams) is on the lower end of the dosage scale. If you are being seen regularly by your doctor (who can monitor the effects) I see nothing wrong with extended use. You should be reporting your dizziness, which can be one of the side effects.

Drug companies provide doctors with important data about their products. It indicates just when, how and for how long specific drugs should (or should not) be given, including potential reactions, from the commonest (as dizziness) to the rarest types. A good rule without exception) for patients to follow is to report any and all symptoms experienced while on any drug therapy. Doctors are not psychics.

Much of my mail reflects concerns about this or that medication. The simple truth is that just about any chemical substance can cause some side effect, some adverse reaction, in the body. Emphasis here is on the word "can."

Azulfidine, a trade name for salicylazosulfapyridine, is prescribed cautiousy for patients with liver or kidney (such as anemia). Those with damage or blood problems history of allergy or monitored carefully while using the drug and adequate fluid intake is important to avoid kidney stone formation.

This drug is considered preferable, despite any potential reactions, to some of the other drugs used to treat chronic colitis.

Three years is a long time to be taking any medication, although some must be taken for life. Your doctor has concluded that you can continue with yours. He is the only competent judge of this, not your pharmacist.

Overseas investment held blameless

Outdated mills hurt MB

VANCOUVER (CP) — Outdated equipment has cut productivity of MacMillan-Bloedel's coastal Logging operations, but overseas investments are not to blame, Calvert Knudsen, corporation president, said Wednesday.

Knudsen said in a television interview part of the industry's problem in meeting market competition stems from obsolete forestry plants and a lower grade of timber.

"Some of this obsolescence came upon us suddenly," he said.

He indicated money spent on the company's overseas on the c ompany's o verseas subsidiaries has not slighted operations in B.C. although MB has been "a relatively aggressive investor" in other parts of the world for the last 17 years, 70 per cent of more than $1 billion has been spent on B.C. operations, he said.

"At the time those (overseas) investments were made, the situation was such that there was no great necessity to deal with the (obsolescence) issue," he said.

Knudsen linked problems of outdated equipment to the quality of timber as logging operations extend to higher elevations.

"A lower grade log now is being produced by the harvest operators," he said, pointing to a decrease in log size and a shift from Douglas fir to hemlock, cedar and balsam.

He said the problem was foreseeable: "All of the tree farms operators on the coast can practically tell log by log for the next 20 years what their cut is going to be.

"But you can't invest in new plants until the log flows have changed," he said. Before the shift in timber, "The old plants were perfectly fine."

The company now plans to invest in modern equipment for conversion plants "to match new technology to those log flows," he said.

Knudsen's comments followed his detailed explanation Tuesday of Christmas layoffs of nearly half of MB's 16,850 employees in the province. He attributed the layoffs to excessively high inventories and slack markets.

"I'm attaching no blame to anyone or any side," he said. "I'd much rather search for a solution to the problem."

But he said labor costs in B.C. are substantially higher than those elsewhere. While he dismissed the possibility of wage cuts as "not realistic," he called for "the utmost in restraint," when it comes to wage demands.

He also asked for work rules to increase efficiency at every level of the corporation and for economic measures on the part of labor, government and management to improve the industry's financial outlook.

Knudsen, who took on the job of company president three months ago, said he felt his position left him open to being "accused of being some kind of 90-day wonder coming up to British Columbia and telling people what their problems are."

Knudsen
. . . accused

He said the worst of MB's financial problems were already solved, but that the over-all state of the forest industry was a long-term problem, despite expectations the world economic state will improve.

Cuts in taxation would help out

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction industry spokesmen called Thursday for major income tax cuts of at least $1.5 to $2 billion in 1977 to stimulate the economy and spur investment.

Henry de Puyjalon, president of the Canadian Construction Association, told a news conference that government policies are needed to soak up unused productive capacity in the economy and increase investment.

"The way to do it is to pass on income tax cuts of major importance."

Construction industry economists said tax cuts would help the industry by taking some of the heat out of wage demands by workers in bargaining next spring and could also reduce unemployment by about one-half a percentage point. November's jobless rate was 7.3 per cent.

The construction industry, while benefiting early from the federal anti-inflation controls because of wage rollbacks, has now run into a phase in which business is not investing in new projects.

De Puyjalon said new housing starts in 1977 are also likely to fall to 230,000 from 250,000 this year. Housing accounts for about 25 per cent of the construction business.

Tax reductions would give the industry a boost later in 1977.

Gold surge

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold surged ahead on European exchanges Thursday following the International Monetary Fund's fifth bullion auction. The U.S. dollar had a lackluster day.

An ounce of gold sold for $137 in London at the close, up from $135.625 the day before. It closed in Zurich at $136.50, up from $135.75.

The boost came after the IMF accepted bids Wednesday for 780,000 ounces of its gold holdings at $137 an ounce, a higher price than the metal had been trading in Europe.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 3 p.m. Thursday at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 1,125 cattle, 30 calves and 573 hogs. Sales were mainly slaughter cows, the balance being slaughter steers and heifers. Slaughter steers sold under pressure at 50 cents lower than Wednesday afternoon's close. Slaughter heifers, with only one good package, sold fully steady with a moderate demand. All slaughter cows sold a full $1 lower during late trading due to narrow demands. The bulk of the cows on offer were of the D3-4 type. Good bulls sold 50 cents lower with a firm export demand. Cows D1-2 17-19; D3 16-17.50; D4 14.50-16. Hogs: 573 hogs sold at Calgary assembly points. Low 52.85, high 53.00, average 52.89.

Flying Services tries new ways

tBy George Gibson
Colonist Business Editor

The new owners and manager of Victoria Flying Services Ltd. have cut out a busy path to follow in order to get the company into what they feel is its proper niche in the area's transportation picture. That slot, they feel, can best be filled by a quick-to-respond charter service, improvements on their scheduled route and a new public image.

Two veteran Victoria airport figures, each with his own established company, have put their resources together into a partnership and this past summer bought the 18-year-old company just shortly before its previous owner and founder died.

Nils Christensen, president of Viking Air, an aircraft repair and overhaul firm, and his partner Courtney Griffiths, who owns Griffiths Avionics, now have ownership of Victoria Flying Services. They bought it for an undisclosed sum from the late William Sylvester last July and just recently bought up the share held by Robert Paterson, a partner of Sylvester's.

The two, busy with their own companies, have taken on a former chief pilot with VFS, Ed Davis, and he is the company's general manager and operations manager. The new management trio enthused about their plans in an interview Thursday.

Some of them:

● Renegotiation of the firm's lease in the Inner Harbor of the wharf that is the Victoria end of the three-times-a-day service to downtown Vancouver;

● The setting up of a feeder system of small float planes to gather Gulf Islands passengers at Ganges for connections with the Victoria-Vancouver service;

● The establishment of a "line facility" centre on the east side of the airport for visiting light aircraft. Fuels and repairs for the planes and ground facilities for pilots and passengers will be features. This will begin in about two weeks.

● The application for a licence to operate a before-and after-hours service between the Victoria and Vancouver airports, supplementing present service by Pacific Western Airlines and Air Canada;

● Upgrading of the present pilot training program.

General manager Davis said that the company is of the opinion that there is a growing market that is slowly reaching B.C., one that requires the availability of twin-engined float and land planes, plus amphibians, that will be able to cover the entire west coast.

"This is one of the last areas of the world that makes flying such an adventure. But we're not utilizing the aircraft in the manner that it could be," he said.

"For instance, did you know that you couldn't fly a float plane very far south in the United States? There's no place south of Oregon to refuel," Davis added.

The company has received some unfavorable publicity in past in comments raised by Victoria city council, particularly with regard to wharf rentals that were claimed to be in arrears. Then there is a group that protests the presence of float plane traffic in the harbor for noise and safety factors.

Davis and Griffiths, however, feel strongly that there is a place for the planes.

"It's one of the few places that such planes can be used in their proper capacity. We and our competitors have proven that people want the service," Griffiths said. The competitors, Air West, now handle in excess of 20,000 annually on the route.

Under the new lease arrangement, which haven't been fully settled, Davis admitted, the city will receive a good rental and the company hopes to be established on more than a month-to-month basis which has been the case in past.

Victoria Flying Services has been moving people out of the harbor all over the coast since 1966. Air West got started in the same capacity two years later, and recently announced that it was expanding its service to downtown Seattle in the spring.

Christensen, who is also company president (Griffiths is secretary-treasurer), is facility. He said that it will operate out of the hangar that he and Griffiths lease from enthused about the new line the provincial government. The VFS operation remains on the airport's west side, where it owns its hangar.

"It will mean that those executive planes that park now over at the main terminal will come over here for our services," he said.

Christensen and Griffiths have the service. They can repair just about anything to be found on the aircraft of today, outside of engine overhaul. Both have built their businesses up over the last 10 years where they've taken over the entire hangar and they no longer have to go out and hunt up business — it comes to them because they're one of the few, and certainly the biggest on the west coast of Canada.

And about that image problem. One of the answers is being found in the paint shop, where each of the company's 20 planes will go for a new coat which will be a basic white and orange, with yellow and brown stripes.

Bond failure

MONTREAL (CP) — A $13-million bond issue by surburban Laval has been rejected by United States investors who are apparently wary about the recent election of the pro-separatist Parti Quebecois government, says Mayor Lucien Paiement.

The erection of steelwork for end walls of new Malaspina College gymnasium in Nanaimo was completed last week and gives some idea of the size of this unusual building. The new gymnasium, which is due to be finished in March, will be the largest air support structure in province and the only one in Canada used to house a multi-purpose instructional facility. The combination of rigid end walls and fabric covering has made for substantial cost saving and the college would have to spend in the region of $1.4 million for a conventional gymnasium of comparable size.

Remember the phrase My heart soars like an eagle? No cruel revenge —student trustee

WOODBRIDGE, Ont. — Jim Corcoran, a Grade 13 student elected as a trustee on the York county board of education, has technically become his principal's boss but will still have to attend classes and abide by school rules, the principal said Wednesday. Principal Stan Meyers of Woodbridge high school said he does not think Corcoran would ever take advantage of the situation. As a member of the 20-man board, Corcoran negotiates salaries and has hiring and firing powers over the principals and 1,160 teachers in the school board just north of Toronto.

Lillooet council welcomes new jail

LILLOOET (CP) — In its search for economic stability, council in this Fraser Canyon community has accepted a proposal that will put dangerous convicts on its doorstep.

Next July, construction is expected to begin on a federal maximum-security penitentiary for 192 prisoners.

It is part of a national program by the Canadian Penitentiary Service to build smaller prisons to replace troubled centres such as the British Columbia penitentiary, a century-old relic with a record of riots and hostage-takings.

Medium-security prisons are also in the works but the federal government wants to act quickly to isolate the dangerous prisoners, who studies say are most likely to cause unrest.

Despite repeated demands by the public for the government to do something about the prison system, most communities don't want the prisons near them.

However, a local Committee for Fair Play is determined to stop the prison from being built in Lillooet.

The committee of local citizens is worried about changes in the quality of life and the social impact of the prison and wants a referendum on the question.

And Vic Adolph, chief of the 11 bands in the Lillooet Indian tribal region, fears extra roads will be built on Indian lands. He says that if political pressure doesn't work, he is prepared to adopt measures such as road blockades to keep out government contractors.

Levesque hints at new test of who should own Labrador

FERMONT, Que. (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Thursday Quebec regards the 1927 decision which defined its current border with Labrador as "unfair" and said he hopes the case will eventually be heard by an impartial court.

The premier emphasized the boundary dispute was not the purpose of his visit to the area, about 500 miles northeast of Quebec City.

The one-day visit, his first official trip outside Montreal and Quebec City since he became premier, includes a speech to a regional convention of the United Steelworkers of America.

"We think it was an unfair decision," Levesque said of the 1927 judgment by the British Privy Council which gave Newfoundland jurisdiction over the current borders of Labrador.

"We would like eventually to get our arguments assessed by an impartial court," he told a Labrador radio reporter.

The premier then visited the $670-million iron mining development at Mount Wright, just outside this new

Mass murder suspect well treated

NEW DELHI (AP) — The sister of a Canadian woman imprisoned for the last five months on suspicion of being linked with an Asian murder ring said Thursday she is satisfied with the way the case is being handled by Indian authorities.

Ending a two-week visit to New Delhi, Denise Leclerc, 25, of Quebec City, also said she believes her sister, Marie-Andree, 31, did not take part in a crime spree across Asia in which foreign tourists were drugged, robbed and in some cases murdered.

"I feel she is innocent," said Denise in an interview with The Associated Press. "When Marie-Andree tells me she has never killed or robbed, I trust her . . . It is impossible for her to begin to kill and rob."

Marie-Andree and her travelling companion, French-Vietnamese Paul Gauthier, were arrested here July 9 after a French tour group was drugged and robbed at a Delhi hotel.

Accused rapist shares docket with husband

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police say a judge may need the wisdom of Solomon when he presides at a joint hearing next week for a man charged with rape and the victim's husband, charged with kidnapping the alleged rapist.

"In 20 years, I've never seen a case like this one," police Sgt. Daniel Hill said.

"We're hoping the judge, who may have to be like King Solomon, will be able to straighten this out."

The husband, Earl Patterson, 33, was released on $2,500 bail after being charged with kidnapping, felonious restraint, aggravated and simple assault, terroristic threatening and possession of offensive weapons.

Carl Butler, 34, was held in lieu of $5,000 bail on charges of rape, robbery, theft, asaault and indecent assault.

The men will appear together next Wednesday before Common Pleas Judge Thomas Shiomos.

Patterson's wife, Maxine, 35, was robbed and raped in her driveway last January. She reported the attack to police, but they were unable to solve the case.

In October, Mrs. Patterson told her husband she saw the rapist getting off a bus in the neighborhood, and the couple began cruising the streets by car looking for him. About a week ago, Patterson bought handcuffs and a bludgeon, police said.

Patterson, a social worker, said he crept up behind Butler and made what he considered a citizen's arrest. But instead of taking Butler to a police station, he took him to the Patterson home and "interrogated" him for 2½ hours in the basement until he extracted a confession, police said.

By the time Patterson brought Butler to the police station, handcuffed and ready for booking, police and FBI agents had launched a search for Butler, whose wife had reported seeing him led away.

Scandal charges ruled out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department has closed its investigation of the Capitol Hill sex scandal and decided not to prosecute former representative Wayne Hays or anyone else involved, officials said Wednesday.

A department source said department lawyers concluded that they did not have enough evidence to support criminal charges against Hays, the once-powerful chairman of the House of Representatives administration committee who was forced to resign because of the scandal.

Elizabeth Ray told prosecutors and the public that Hays kept her on his committee payroll as his mistress. She said she did not work and that she could not even type.

She has since used the notoriety to promote her book about the affair.

"Her story is awfully shaky," said the department source. "She's just not a very good witness for the purpose of criminal prosecution."

Coroner adjourns inquest

The inquest into the death of a 21-year-old whose body was found on a downtown Victoria rooftop has been adjourned until Jan. 19.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre began the inquest Tuesday in the death of Calvin John Marshall, who was a resident of Port Alberni until Dec. 1, when his body was discovered on the roof of 539 Yates Street with his hands tied behind his back.

An autopsy showed Marshall died of a fractured neck and Victoria city detectives are still investigating the case.

A total of 10 witnesses were called Tuesday and Armand Petronio acted as crown counsel during the opening session of the inquest at the law courts building.

The inquest is to continue Jan. 19, starting at 7:30 p.m. at the law courts building, unless criminal charges have been laid before that date.

Lisbon dry after blast

LISBON (UPI) — A saboteur's bomb blew a hole in Lisbon's main aqueduct Thursday, cutting the capital's water supply to a trickle. The water department said the blast cut off the capital from at least 90 per cent of its water supply, and urged the public to restrict water usage to the absolute minimum until service is restored, at least a day away. Housewives crowded into stores selling bottled mineral water, factories closed and restaurants ran out of dishes.

—Colonist Corrspandnt

Spray shoots high and seagulls fly merrily as Wednesday storm batters shores of Vancouver Island, causing onlookers to search for safe vantage points from where to watch fury of first big gale of the late fall. Southern Island particularly felt the storm's blow, with many power outages all the way from Nanaimo to the Capital Region. However, even though the winds reached around 75 miles an hour, there were no serious injury and no major damage.

Inquest sheds little light

COURTENAY — The inquest Wednesday in deaths in the crash of a Canadian Forces Voodoo aircraft last summer shed little light on the cause of the accident.

The jury found only that Captains Roy James Smith and Wesley John Cox died on the afternoon of June 5, 1976, in the crash of a military aircraft three miles northeast of Cape Lazo near CFB Comox.

Budget axe falls

Duncan's complex loses day-care centre, seating

Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — Physical changes have been made in the plans for the proposed community centre complex here in order to come within the $6 million budgeted.

But community centre committee chairman Pat Clements contends that it won't affect the total concept of the project, which was approved by referendum last Dec. 20.

"Except for the loss of the day-care centre, I really don't think these changes will affect the original proposed function of the building,' he told the Cowichan Valley Region Board this week.

Clements was responding to a question from North Cowichan Ald. and regional director Mrs. Margaret Robertson, who felt the committee should be "very honest with the public if these changes were going to affect the original concept."

Vancouver architect Vladimir Plavsie recommended the changes in the plans to bring the construction within what had been budgeted.

In a review of the capital construction estimates, the committee had determined earlier this week that unless some changes were made, it was looking at a total cost of $7,325,500, a million dollars over original estimates.

In September, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, who is responsible for recreation grants, said after getting a cost estimate from the department of public works surveyors, she was "very concerned" about the proposed project's burden onthe population of the referendum.

Preliminary estimates by the provincial goverment officials on the building, which is slated to go out for tender in February, had pegged the construction cost figure at $7,240,000.

But at a meeting in October with the provincial secretary's representatives, the architect assured those present that the building could be constructed, furnished and landscaped for the $6 million budgeted.

His revisions this week indluded 18 changes in the original plans.

Major items, which will no longer be included in the general contract, are the following:

- Day-care centre.
- Landscaping.
- Paving of the southeasterly perking lot for 204 cars.
- Kitchen-storage-electrical room and future classrooms in the multi-purpose hall.
- Orchestra pit lift.
- Half of the arena seating.

Although Provincial Secretary McCarthy had also expressed some concern about the current net operating deficit which she estimated at $400,000, the committee chairman Clements asserted their originally-projected operating estimates and debt burden would be complied with.

When the complex referendum was proposed, it was estimated that 7.99 mills would be required for a one-year operating deficit and annual debt retirement from the city of Duncan, Southend North Cowichan recreation area, and Electoral Area E.

Because Electoral Area D does not share in this debt retirement and operating deficit for the ice arena, due to its existing taxation to the Mill Bay Recreation Centre, its taxation was estimated at 3.7 mills.

Taxpayers will not see any increase in their taxes due to the community centre until 1978.

Cowichan study:

Young people face stark jobs reality

By CRAIG MEREDITH

DUNCAN — There are more people in the under-25 age bracket who are unemployed than employed in Cowichan Valley, according to the preliminary results of a study being conducted for Canada Manpower.

Steve Torrence, who has been working on the study in Duncan on a part-time basis since early October, told the Colonist Wednesday that final numerical results and recommendations would not be available until late January.

"But this is the indication we have received so far for employables in the under-25-year-old group — there is a very severe unemployment situation for this age group in the Cowichan Valley," he stated.

Torrence was asked by the Duncan Canada Manpower office in September to analyse the severity of employment problems for people under 25, and to determine the effectiveness of Canada Manpower in closing the gap between needs and services.

The Duncan Manpower manager, John McCuloch, said he made this request because his office was becoming concerned about what was happening to students who had been leaving school in the past few years.

"They just weren't showing up on our files, and we were finding this quite unusual considering the employment situation here in the last two years," the Manpower manager said, indicating the overall figure for unemployment had been fluctuating between 15-and-20 per cent.

Since the Manpower consultant has begun travelling from Victoria to Duncan two or three days a week to conduct the study, he has set up a nine-member community advisory group and distributed more than 200 three-page questionnaires to those in the under-25 age bracket.

Torrence said the members of the committee were selected to represent a cross-section of the Cowichan Valley.

Included is a representative from a major employer, a union, the Cowichan Indian band, high school students, teachers, department of human resources, and other community groups.

Through these members and other local agencies, the questionnaires have been circulated and information is being gathered to analyse the problem.

Before Torrence's final report is made public, it will be referred to the committee for its perusal and recommendations.

From the survey results received so far, the consultant said, if he was under 25, he would not rely completely on Canada Manpower assistance to find a job.

"Manpower can assist in preparing the individual on how to seek employment, but the vast majority of those surveyed expect us to have every job listed, which unfortunately is not the case," Torrence said.

Another major problem, he said, was the student reliance on their parents for advice on how to get a job.

"Chances are their parents have had their present employment position for a number of years. The situation in most cases for their parents, when they were first seeking employment, is not comparable to the present labor market."

Because of the under-25 group's reliance on their parents, the Manpower consultant suggested, one of the biggest tasks may be educating the parents.

What does he personally recommend to the unemployed individual who recently left school?

"Because the unskilled person is a dying commodity, I would suggest that each individual seeking employment not underestimate their hobbies or voluntary work, seek professional assistance on job-seeking methods, and most important, be aggressive," Torrence said.

Information from the survey is currently being put together, but the Manpower consultant said he would still welcome any questions or advice the public could give him.

Alberni Valley prison possible

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — There would appear to be a distinct possibility that the Alberni Valley or the west coast of its regional district could become the site of a new federal maximum-security prison.

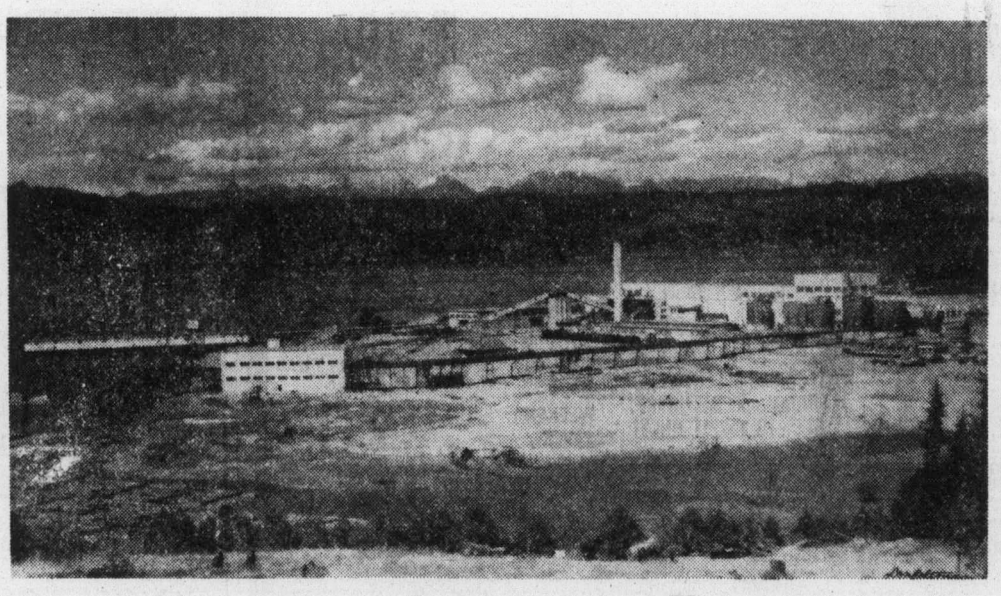
Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson was quoted last week as wishing to have some "public feedback" on any proposal he might make to the penitentiaries branch of the solicitor-general's department on the location of a second penitentiary for dangerous offenders in B.C. One has been slated for the Lillooet area.

City council here this week decided to discuss the matter only in the privacy of committee. It was brought up at the regular meeting, but since no concrete proposal had been received from Anderson, although a letter is expected this week, little discussion took place before a motion to move the matter to committee took place.

Anderson, indicating that he was neither for or against the proposal, had stated that the presence of the prison in the area would create some 200 jobs, and pour about $2.5 million into the local economy in payroll alone. Another $500,000 might accrue to local merchants and service people in supplying the institution, he said.

It is expected that council will take some action on the idea when Anderson's letter is received.

In the meantime, the town of Ucluelet on the west coast is also intrigued with the possibilities of locating the prison in its environs, and the matter will come up for discussion at the regular council meeting this week, according to Mayor Edna Batchelor.



Down the memory mill

This mill at Duncan Bay near Campbell River was spanking new in this picture in 1952. It became Vancouver Island's fifth pulp-and-paper mill, and there are big things in store for whole Elk Falls complex in Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd.'s ambitious, multi-million-dollar plan for its Vancouver Island operations.

New vessel soon for Ocean Crown

Construction has begun to replace Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd.'s tug Ocean Crown with a new vessel, the company has disclosed. Crown Zellerbach has extensive operations nn the Island.

John Stenstrom of Vancouver, manager of water transportation, said in an interview that the new tug will be brought into service in September, at which time Ocean Crown will be retired.

Stenstrom said the 33-year-old, wooden-hulled Ocean Crown, often seen in Vancouver Island waters, had reached the point where it was no longer suitable for the company's requirements.

The new steel-hulled tug will be 114 feet long with two 1,300-horsepower engines. There will be accommodation for seven crew members.

The new vessel is being built at the Vancouver shipyard of John Manly Ltd. at a cost of $2½ million.

Its completion will bring Crown Zellerbach's fleet to three modern vessels — including the Hecate Crown, built in 1970, and the Comox Crown, built in 1974 — and one older vessel, the Fraser Crown, built in 1944.

The tugboats tow barges and booms of logs from the company's logging areas to its mills, the company explained in its publication Crown Zellerbach News.

New Zealand mood hardens over sport ties

Wisdom of link with South A frica increasingly questioned

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand, still smarting from having been the target of black Africa's boycott at the Montreal Olympics, is increasingly questioning the wisdom of continuing sports ties with South Africa.

Citizens of this sport-loving nation are beginning to face up to the prospect that they may wreck the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton unless they sever sporting ties with South Africa.

The country is still gripped by bitter controversy, which has lasted for more than a decade, over sporting contacts with South Africa which have angered black Africans and other opponents of the republic's policy of apartheid.

Political observers say the mood in New Zealand is hardening against further contact with South Africa at any level, and that the government of Prime Minister Robert Muldoon is showing cautious but significant signs of shifting its formerly rigid attitudes on South African sports links.

The government is emphasizing its total abhorrence of apartheid and racially-segregated sports, and drawing the attention of sporting bodies and administrators to United Nations resolutions calling for the cutting of all sports contacts with South Africa.

When the New Zealand Rugby Union announced last week that it would not accept an invitation for a Maori team to tour South Africa next year, because of a heavy domestic programme, the minister for foreign affairs, Brian Talboys, welcomed the move which he said might reflect the changing attitudes.

He added that on a recent visit to the Middle East and East Africa, he had encountered a depth of feeling among Africans against apartheid.

While the New Zealand government would leave the final decision on sporting contacts with South Africa to the sports bodies, he hoped they would seek government advice before planning sporting exchanges.

Muldoon denied in an interview that his National Party government had changed its policy which remained "one of non-interference in sport." But he conceded they had made a number of firm statements about the issue in recent months.

"We have been stating what was said so many times before, but stating it in the context of the All Blacks rugby tour of South Africa earlier this year," he said.

The game of rugby — New Zealand's national obsession — remains at the heart of the internatonal storm which burst into full fury at Montreal. Most black African natons ordered their athletes to withdraw from the Games when the International Olympic Committee refused to ban the New Zealanders whose All Blacks were then on tour in South Africa.

Sporting contact with South Africa was a burning issue in the 1975 general election and many political experts consider that Muldoon's steamroller win over the then Labor government headed by Wallace Rowling was partly, if not largely, due to his pledge that a National Party government would not hinder any teams going to South Africa.

In New Zealanders' eyes, the flash point which led to black Africa's total boycott of New Zealand athletes was the visit here well before the Olympics of Abraham Ordia, Nigerian chairman of the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa.

Ordia sought to meet Muldoon or one of his ministers to discuss the All Blacks tour, but the prime minister flatly refused to have any contact with the African official, and said that Ordia could "stew in his own juice."

Public opinion appeared then to be overwhelmingly in favour of the tour going on, but there was a big swing of the pendulum after the defeat of the New Zealanders in the rugby test series.

"The tour left an unpleasant taste in our mouths," one sports administrator said, adding that many New Zealanders had been angered b South Africa's handling of the Soweto rioting while the All Blacks were on tour, by what he claimed was unnecessary dirty play by South African rugby players and the partiality of South African referees during the test series.

In his interview, Muldoon said the only change in his government's stand was that Talboys had said recently that if any sports body wanted to approach him, he would set out for them the United Nations resolutions on apartheid and apartheid in sport.

Talboys had stated further, he noted, that if New Zealand sports organizations had contact with South Africa it might further exacerbate the international situation, but that they would have to make their own decisions.

The prime minister, along with Rowling and leading sports administrators, all agree that the Commonwealth Games are in jeopardy because of the African boycott of New Zealand athletes.

"I'm coming to the conclusion that some of the black African nations are going to prevent their sportsmen going to Edmonton in order to keep attention on apartheid in South Africa," said Muldoon.

"I think the New Zealand decision is very largely irrelevant to that determination. We are certainly not changing our policy."

He reacted strongly to suggestions voiced by some sports officials that New Zealand should withdraw voluntarily in order to save the Commonwealth Games.

"I don't know who suggested that, but they certainly don't know the New Zealand government. That's just fantasy."

He did not agree it would throw the moral responsibility for the breakdown of the Commonwealth Games on to black Africa.

"I think what would happen then would be that they would look around for someone else they didn't like to make the same point," he said, adding that they might turn against Britain.

"Some of their statements have been totally irrational," Muldoon said. "I am speaking particularly of the Supreme Council of African Sport rather than the governments.

"By and large, our experience has been that when you get close to them (governments) and talk sense, they moderate their attitude," the New Zealand prime minister said.

Volleyball visitors display winning form

Shigemi Murata of Senshu, the No. 2 ranked high-school girls volleyball club in Japan leaps high to spike the ball during exhibition action Thursday afternoon at S. J. Willis School while Janet Hough of the Victoria Y makes vain attempt to block the shot. Others shown include Kayomi Tsuzinaka (3) of Senshu and an unidentified teammate and Linda Chiu (11) of Victoria. The visitors posted a 3-1 win in the match on scores of 15-1, 10-15, 15-1, 15-5. More than 400 spectators watched the match with half of them participating in a pre-match volleyball clinic.

Fergy's erratic start leaves him off pace

Cec Ferguson shot par golf over the last 11 holes Thursday but more than half the field playing in the Professional Golfers Association qualifying tournament are ahead of him after the first round of an 108-hole test.

The Victoria pro, playing what is considered the toughest of the three courses being used, went seven over par on the first seven holes. He settled down there, but couldn't get any strokes back and finished with a seven over par 77.

Ferguson is one of 375 golfers seeking to qualify for a card which will permit them to play on the regular PGA tour this year. It hasn't been determined as yet how many cards will be at stake in the current qualifying tournament, but it could be as few as 10.

The field is playing over three par 70 courses near Brownsville, Texas — Angel, the course Ferguson played Thursday, and El Diablo and Valley International, which is rated the easiest. All golfers will play one round on each course, and then the field will be cut to around 110. The last three rounds will be played on the El Diablo layout, and there will be further cuts in succeeding rounds.

His early troubles left Ferguson in a position which would make another slip disastrous. He is 10 strokes behind the leader, Don Pooley of Riverside, Calif., and nine strokes behind 10 others tied at 68. More important at the moment is that 150 scores of 75 or better were turned in and it may take par golf in the next two rounds to make the first cut.

Pooley turned in a no-bogey round, carding three pars to beat par by as many strokes with a 33-34 log. Among those who shot 68 was Australian Graham Marsh, who had a pair of 34s.

Eastern Pat O'Donnell led the Canadian contingent with a 69, and then came Ontario's Kelly Roberts at 72. Dave Barr of Kelowna had a 75 and Bob Beauchemin of Victoria couldn't get his game together and had to settle for an 82.

Anderson added to tourney club

CALGARY — The Western Canada Hockey League's team for the international major junior tournament scheduled for later this month was completed Thursday with the addition of eight players.

Among the latest selections was forward Gregg Anderson of Victoria Cougars who joins teammates Curt Fraser and Murray Bannerman on the roster.

Others named by coach Ernie McLean were defenceman Brad McCrimmon of Brandon Wheat Kings and Miles Zahako of New Westminster Bruins; centres Tom Roulston of Winnipeg Monarchs, Brent Peterson of Portland Winter Hawks and Doug Lecuyer of Calgary Centennials; rightwingers Tony Currie of Portland and Stan Smyl of New Westminster.

The 29 Players which have been named will go to the team's training camp in Calgary Dec. 22 but McLean will have to drop at least four players by Dec. 25.

A final decision on the roster size will be made by the teams involved in the tournament but it has already been decided that each team will only be allowed to dress 20 players for each game.

The tournament for the Labatt Cup, which opens Dec. 26, involves the WCHL all-star team and teams from Ontario, Quebec and the Soviet Union. Games will be played in Elmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge.

Flyers had only 16 shots on goal in what was a close-checking game, but they held the Bruins to 18. The clinching goal came 20 seconds from time without the puck entering the net. It was credited to Bobby Clarke, who took a wide shot at the unguarded goal and received automatic credit when Bobby Schmautz threw his stick at the puck.

Victory regained a second-place tie, and moved the Flyers within three points of the leading New York Islanders.

Penguins were held to 18 shots on goal, but Nanaimo's Wayne Bianchin scored in the first period, rookie Blair Chapman broke a 1-1 tie in the second period, and Denis Herron, who made 29 stops, took it from there.

Brentwood sides win

Teams from Brentwood College in Mill Bay have won three of four matches this week in Britain.

The Brentwood I side, which fought to a 24-24 tie with Radley in its tour opener last weekend, dropped a 17-12 decision to Eastborne (Sussex) in its second game but bounced back Thursday with an 18-6 win over Durham.

The Brentwood II team topped Eastbourne 10-7 and romped to a 35-0 win over Durham.

The Island sides play in Blackpool and Croydon before returning to Canada in time for Christmas.

Tampering charges involve city player

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps have named 16 players who were to leave today for Haiti to begin training for Soccer Canada's game Dec. 22 against the United States in the World Cup preliminary round.

Included on the roster were three players — Gary Ayre, Wes McLeod and Victoria's Bob Bolitho — who were reported to be negotiating with the new Honolulu franchise in the North American Soccer League.

General-manager John Best and coach Eckhard Krautzun of the Whitecaps, also members of the NASL, denounced the Honolulu situation Thursday and said it was a violation of NASL rules which stop member teams from approaching players involved in World Cup playoffs.

"There seems to be no question that this is tampering and in contravention of league rules," said Krautzun.

Two new additions were named to the Soccer Canada team, both from NASL clubs. Ike McKay of Victoria played for Portland and Victor Kodelia for San Antonio (now Honolulu) in 1976.

Krautzun said that negotiations were continuing for school teacher Gary Thompson as a possible late addition. He also said that John McGrame and Ken Whitehead of Simon Fraser University would remain on standby in Vancouver.

Team manager John McMahon said in a telephone interview from Toronto that a number of warmup games in Port-Au-Prince had been arranged, although dates and opponents for Soccer Canada were not available.

Winner of the Canada-U.S. game will advance along with Mexico to the next round of World Cup playoffs.

The three countries finished a double-round-robin series tied last month and Mexico took one of the two berths because of a superior goal average.

Braves snap tie

Saanich Braves broke a tie for the lead Thursday night by trouncing Oak Bay Trios, 10-3, in one of two South Vancouver Island Junior B Hockey League games.

In the other, played at Memorial Arena, Ray's Red Wings of Victoria blew a three-goal lead and settled for a 6-6 tie with Lake Cowichan Bairds.

Braves, two points ahead of Fuller Lake, were again led by Ron Jobson and Ed Beauchemin.

Jobson, getting five points for the second time in a week, is again five points ahead in the individual point race. He had three goals and two assists in breaking away from Fuller Lake's Terry Ellison.

Beauchemin, who leads the league in goals, made his 29th, 30th and 31st scoring shots.

Rob Coldwell (2), Bill Adkin and Brent Patterson got the other goals for the Braves. Stan Alstad, Dave Murrell and Mike Paget scored for the Trios.

In Memorial Arena, the Wings lost a three-goal lead in the last 13 minutes. Rob Frost started the Lake Cowichan rally at 7:16, Ron Mayea got the second of his two goals at 12:10 and Craig Baird tied it with a power-play goal at 17:56.

New head of National Arts Centre warns:

By LIANE HELLER

MONTREAL (CP) — Art is not cheap, Donald MacSween says.

The city of Vienna spends $40 million a year on the arts.

And even with a $25-million subsidy, seats at the Paris Opera cost as much as $40.

"It's unfortunate that even with such high subsidies, seats have to be so high-priced," MacSween said in an interview here.

In less than six months, problems like federal aid and ticket prices will become more than subjects for conversation, as fas as MacSween is concerned.

The 41-year-old director of the National Theatre School (NTS) has been appointed to replace G. Hamilton Southam, retiring general manager of the National Arts Centre (NAC) in Ottawa.

Next April, MacSween will leave the familar hallways and offices of the NTS for the modern luxury of the arts centre.

He won't be treading on unknown territory, however. He has spent countless evenings at the NAC. It's just that his involvement with the centre will go beyond sitting in one of the three theatres to watch a play or concert.

The prospect, he said, is "terribly exciting."

"It's like having your own little London or New York readily available," he said.

With two restaurants, lounges, shops, a gallery display area, its own orchestra and series in French and English theatre, opera, dance and pop concerts, the NAC offers, as Southam has said, "almost everything to everybody."

The NAC, from its inception in 1969, was intended to fulfil rather stringent requirements.

The quality of the entertainment must be of the highest level; the price of admission must be as low as possible. The NAC should function as a showcase for Canadian and, in some cases, foreign performers; it must also act as a laboratory, creating in-house productions and companies. The centre must provide both French and English productions.

In short, the NAC was devised as a paragon of the arts, an example for Canadian arts centres, companies and individual performers to look up to.

To MacSween, maintaining, developing and carrying out these mandates are the most important responsibilities he'll have.

He would like to see the NAC form a resident theatre company, about 15 to 20 of the country's leading actors.

The company members would be "resident in Ottawa, on a basic retainer, performing one or two major roles and several minor roles during the course of a season. The rest of the time they would be free to job out (perform with other companies or do films."

If such a company were created, it would act as a "chemical reaction," stimulating the country's theatre groups to set up similar organizations, which could exchange casts and programs.

"It's like the difference between pickup football and the development of teams and a league. No matter how magnificent the pickup teams are, the time has perhaps come for a national theatre."

As far as the NAC role in forming such a company, "I hope it will happen."

"So far, the accent has been placed on the musical side. A permanent orchestra was an obvious necessity," he said.

Of course, forming an in-house French and English theatre company — not to mention a dance ensemble — requires a "healthy subsidy."

The NAC already receives the highest subsidy of any arts centre in Canada. Of its $14-million budget for 1975-1976, about $8 million came from the federal treasury board, $3.5 million from box office revenue and the remainder from the Canada Council, the regional municipality of Ottawa-Carleton and other subsidies.

But while attendance at the NAC continued to run high during the last season, at 79 per cent of capacity with programs such as the concert, opera and theatre series drawing 98.4 per cent of capacity, the centre's deficit in 1975-76 was the highest in its during the last season, at 79

While MacSween wants to continue the fight for higher subsidies and low ticket prices, he will have a tough job on his hands.

Because of the deficit, the centre's annual report says, ticket prices will have to increase and some programs will have to be cut or postponed.

MacSween hasn't developed any specific plans for the extensive responsibilities that will be his in April. He will head a staff of 300. He will be responsible for every aspect of the NAC operation, financial and artistic.

At a news conference, when his appointment was announced, MacSween said he felt a sense of the NAC's "controlled chaos."

"If it were to run as smoothly as your local McDonald's something would be wrong with the organization," he said. "When you have a group of highly creative people working together, the building's bound to vibrate. It's totally different sort of operation."

MacSween's three years at the NTS — although on a much lower scale — involved that kind of responsibility, urgency and enthusiasm.

He talked lovingly about the theatre school he joined in 1973, after 10 years as a lawyer.

MacSween has had something to do with theatre since his McGill University days. He helped found the McGill annual show, the Red and White Revue; he co-wrote and appeared in My Fur Lady, which was later performed on a cross-country tour.

MacSween said he doesn't know the exact reasons he was chosen for the NAC job.

"To begin with, I fulfilled the basic prerequisites; I'm bilingual and Canadian."

He smiled. "That's a good start."

New light shed on blood clots

By HARRY NELSON
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A team of British medical researchers recently published a report that helps to explain why the tiny structures called platelets that make blood clots do not form clots in arteries that are healthy.

It also helps explain whyc clots may form in arteries that are not healthy — clots that can trigger a heart attack or a stroke.

The Britishers discovered that healthy artery walls release a chemical which can keep platelets from clumping.

According to scientists, the chemical is the most powerful inhibitor of platelet clumping yet discovered.

The chemical discovered by Vane and his group is prostaglandin which, to date, they have called prostglandin X (PGX). Identification of its structure was a joint effort by Wellcome Research Laboratories in England, where Vane is research director, and the Upjohn Co.

Their discovery and the identification of PGX's chemical makeup opens possibilities for developing new drugs to prevent or treat heart attacks and strokes.

Here is the theoretical basis for believing that PGX may, in five to 10 years, lead to new cardiovascular drugs:

Last year a Swedish researcher, Bengt Samuelsson of the Karolinska Institute, discovered that when platelets stick to one another they release a substance called thromboxane A2 (TCA).

TXA is a powerful stimulatn for the clumping of platelets. This clumping is the basis for the formation of a blood clot. Blood clot formation is sa very desirable thing if, for example, the artery has been severed. The clot serves as a plug to fill the hile and stop the bleeding.

But if the platelets clump and eventually form a clot inside an artery, the clot might break loose and travel to the heart or brain, causing a heart attack or stroke.

Vane and other scientists theorize that this does not happen if the artery is healthy. The reason, they speculate, is that platelets, when they touch a healthy artery wall, release a substance which the inner lining of the wall used to make PGX.

Because PGXisapowerflu

However, if the artery wall is not healthy and has deposits of fatty material called plaques, there will be no opportunity for the substance released by the platelets to be used to make PGX. The platelets may, however, continue to release TXA; the platelet clumper, resulting in the formation of a dangerous clot.

If the British and Swedish work does lead to the development of drugs helpful to humans, Vane envisions they might be useful either for providing the PGX not released by unhealthy arteries or to inhibit substances involved in platelet clumping.

However, he pointed out that a great many potential obstacles must be overcome before any usable drug becomes available. Vane estimated that will take five to 10 years.

Novel exhibits presented

The exhibits range from what is claimed to be the world's thinnest watch to a big road transporter that, the makers say, can carry loads of up to 50 tons, no matter how delicate, thanks to a secret suspension system.

Many exhibits reflect such current trends as an electrical acupuncture machine and numerous devices harnessing the sun to economize on energy use.

They vary from under-floor home heating with water, warmed by the sun through a special glass roof, to a garden barbecue, comprising a radar-shaped reflective disc with a grill in the middle.

For the adventurous there is an all-purpose survival suit which, it is said, will also repel sharks.

Can't depend on study, region told

A $200,000 engineering report commissioned by the Capital Region Board contains numerous errors, and all recommendations will have to be checked out by district engineers, board directors were told Wednesday.

Consultants Ker Priestman and Associates Ltd. had done very little field engineering in making the report, chief engineer Norman Howard reported.

"An interesting point that emerges from this work is that the recommendations contained in the Ker Priestman report should not be taken verbatim and all recommendations must be checked out to ascertain their engineering feasibility," he added.

Jack Priestman, a principal of the company, would not comment on the criticisms that were made at a planning and zoning committee meeting.

"I have no comment until I hear from Mr. Howard as to the actual points of criticism," Priestman said later. "At this time, it would be wrong to comment on it."

Campbell
. . . read it first

The committee had been discussing the proposed development of a warehouse on Jacklin Road in Langford.

The Ker Priestman drainage report for the Western community had indicated that surface water would drain beneath Jacklin Road.

However, Howard said there was no provision for water to pass under Jacklin Road, although it had apparently done so in former years.

The drainage report said the Glen Lake and Langford Lake systems should be interconnected, with water level control devices at each end.

"Although I agree with this concept, in principle, very little field engineering work has been undertaken by the consultants," said Howard.

The district's engineering department will be investigating drainage recommendations in detail, and Howard said it would be two months before a report was available on the proposed development.

"How much did this report cost us?" she asked, but the figure was not available at the meeting.

"We have a report here and there seem to be conflicting evaluations.

"This surely should be at least discussed, but I am not sure how to go about it."

Colwood director Howard Drummond said there were numerous areas in the report that no one seemed happy with.

Chairman James Campbell said the implication was that the report had some errors. It had to be read, and then another look taken at the situation, he said. "You can't accept any of these recommendations."

He said he supposed almost any report contained some errors.

No-Grade 11 'news' upsets Lansdowners

Students at Lansdowne junior high are angry and upset at the news that the Greater Victoria school board has decided against offering Grade 11 courses at the school next year.

School board chairman William Ross immediately branded the report as "absolutely, incontrovertibly false."

"The board has made no decision to change the grade structure for Lansdowne, and either the students are guilty of a gross error in judgment or someone has perpetrated a monumental lie." Ross promised to take full disciplinary action against any administrators or staff found responsible for starting the rumor.

In a letter to parents, Kelly Speak, chairman of the Lansdowne Representative Assembly, said the move is a denial of a commitment made to the students and parents of the school.

"After three years of planning, three years of anticipation, and three years of hope on the part of everyone involved, we were told Lansdowne was not going to offer Grade 11 courses next year."

School principal R. E. Jones confirmed that the current Grade 10 students had been told when they came in at Grade 8 that they could complete their secondary years at Lansdowne.

Jones broke the news to the staff of the school, which had already begun preparing Grade 11 courses, on Tuesday evening and to the students on Wednesday morning. About 250 Grade 10 students attend Lansdowne.

"I tried to do it in a way that would cause the least upset possible, and I was amazed at how emotional some of the students became. Some of them were in tears."

The school board action jeopardizes the "special and fragile" spirit of the school, Miss Speak said in her letter to the parents.

"We at Lansdowne have all worked hard to build up a spirit that we consider to be very special. This sudden arbitrary change in policy cannot have anything but a destructive effect. We had joined together in a dream for the future, only to have it smashed at the last moment if this delay is permitted," Miss Speak wrote.

The teachers and students at the school had been warned earlier this fall that plans to add space to the school to accommodate the additional students would probably be postponed from next year.

"But the feeling in the school seemed to be that we should go ahead with Grade 11 anyway," principal Jones said, observing that about 100 students not attending Lansdowne for Grade 11 will end up in overcrowded Mt. Douglas Senior Secondary.

He added that the original plans for Lansdowne called for the school to complement the "more structured" Sentinel Elementary School by offering a "more structured" program through the secondary years.

In her letter to the parents, Miss Speak said "with enough response from you, our parents and the taxpayers, this sudden decision could be reversed and restored to its original position." The letter listed names and phone numbers of school district trustees and administrative staff.

Home lot lessees get right to buy

People leasing crown land on 60-year leases will be able to purchase their property from the provincial government.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday the monthly lease system was established by the NDP but was not in keeping with Social Credit policy.

"With few exceptions, the previous NDP government would dispose of lots only by way of 60-year monthly leases," he said. "Some 760 leases are in effect in various parts of the province."

Curtis said the present government felt it was "the right of such people to buy the title of the lot at the fair market value at any time that the lessee wishes."

UVic music wing given nod after all

The Universities Council of B.C. appears to have changed its mind on the need for a new music wing for the University of Victoria.

Education Minister Pat McGeer received a letter Wednesday from the council approving the expenditure of the funds, estimated at $3,375,000, to build the music wing.

The council earlier this year refused to recommend construction of the music wing, provoking protest from UVic president Howard Petch, who said he feared the loss of faculty members in the university's music program unless better facilities could be found.

The request from the council is still subject to approval by McGeer and the treasury board, but the council has designated it as a top-priority project.

'No formal planning approach, no budgetary control system'

WCB management scorched in report

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

A devastating indictment of middle and top management at the Workers' Compensation Board was made public Thursday.

In preparation since January, the report prepared by P. S. Ross and Partners, a management consultant firm, states the WCB between 1971 and the present had "no formal planning approach, no budgetary control system, an inadequate management information system and a lack of organizational clarity."

And the people running the $141 million operation were, at the middle-management level, "seriously weakened, and top management reportedly has operated in an authoritarian, elitist and secretive manner."

Rehabilitation praised

Only the rehabilitation branch of the operation comes out of the investigation with words of praise. The report states that morale was high in that section, the operation reasonably well run and the results of their work satisfactory.

While all aspects of the WCB operation come under critical fire, some of the harshest words are reserved for the board's data-processing department operating with all the latest electronic aids and IBM computers.

The Ross report says bluntly: "The over-all picture is one of much hardware working long hours to produce only the most rudimentary information."

While noting that the data-processing department had attempted to apply "appropriate tools-of-the-trade" in its operation, the report says it hadn't been successful in utilizing those tools.

Staff, costs soaring

In addition to the hardware, "the department on two occasions within the past year has retained the services of IBM to monitor the functioning of its computer system with the idea of improving terminal response time . . . inspite of these efforts, the impression remains that the productivity of the system and of the department as a whole, is distinctly low. This was particularly noticeable on the hardware side where, during one 10-minute period in the computer room . . . sufficient productivity could not be mustered from the remaining sources to print more than two lines on the high-speed printer."

Using 1971 as a base year, the report reveals that the

Highlights

- The Workers' Compensation Board should enter its next fiscal year with a well-planned budget incorporating a hard comprehensive analysis of proposed new or expanded programs;
- A management system should be develped to provide accurate, meaningful, timely information on indicators of performance other than budgets;
- Decrease full authority of the board chairman by establishing a board of directors to whom the chairman would be accountable, with a requirement to submit annual plans, budgets and quarterly statements of operating expense to the labor minister;
- Maintenance of the present basic role of the board comprising claims adjudication and payment, medical and vocational rehabilitation, accident prevention, industrial hygiene and first aid training;
- A formalized system of long-range planning;
- A well-organized comprehensive cost reduction program covering all areas of the board's operations.

132,000 in danger of hearing damage

Of a workforce of 850,000 people in potentially-noisy environments in B.C., 132,000 are considered in danger of suffering hearing damage.

And the P.S. Ross report on the Workers' Compensation Board states that of that total between 13,000 and 20,000 will probably finish up with claims for compensation.

Labor Minister Allan Williams agreed that hearing damage was of prime concern to his department and to the WCB "as are all job safety measures."

But he could offer no immediate relief to the situation other than to promise to keep studying ways to eliminate the hazard.

The Ross report recommends an early warning system for workers in noisy environments and suggests that preventive policy measures be stepped up.

Bill lops 50,000 from UIC rolls

Cullen
. . . saving to create jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bud Cullen introduced a bill Thursday that would cut about 50,000 claimants off the unemployment insurance rolls.

The amendment which would require claimants to work 12 weeks out of 52 before they qualify for benefits was immediately criticized by Andy Hogan (NDP—Cape Breton-East Richmond), who said it would have a devastating impact in areas of high unemployment.

"It's very damned hard for people in some areas to find work even for eight weeks out of the year — as incredible as that sounds to a person in Toronto," Hogan said in an interview after the bill was introduced in the Commons.

The bill likely will get a rough ride in the House because the proposal to extend the qualifying period to 12 weeks from the current eight weeks also has been criticized as too harsh by some Liberal backbenchers. On the other hand, some Conservative MPs say that even 12 weeks is too generous and the qualifying period should be even longer.

Cullen said savings resulting from tougher unemployment insurance regulations would be directed into job-creation projects in economically-depressed areas.

He said most of the 50,000 who would be affected by the extended qualifying period are not steady members of the permanent work force. They tend to be persons under 25 or housewives who work for small stretches to supplement their family income.

The bill would implement a number of measures outlined by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in his May budget speech.

It would merge the Unemployment Insurance Commission with the department of manpower and immigration. The new department would be called the department of employment and immigration and Cullen said the merger would enable the government to provide "one-stop service" for the unemployed.

In addition to toughening the qualifying period for the unemployment insurance benefits, the bill would tie special extended benefits to regional unemployment rates rather than the national rate. That would result in longer benefit periods in areas of high unemployment, such as the Atlantic provinces and parts of Quebec, and a shorter benefit period in areas of relatively low unemployment, such as the Prairies.

The government also plans to link more closely the number of weeks during

Marchand named to Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Jean Marchand was installed as a senator Thursday, 45 days after declining a Senate seat to run unsuccessfully in the Nov. 15 Quebec election.

"I'm still alive enough to fight," he said as he left Parliament in October. Thursday, he returned and took a seat in the Upper Chamber, only a few hours after his friend and former cabinet colleague Prime Minister Trudeau announced his appointment.

Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Steuart, who will be replaced at a provincial leadership convention this weekend, was also named to the Senate.

The appointments fill two of 19 vacancies in the 104-seat Senate, and are likely to add a touch of spice to that chamber.

Both men are short and scrappy, and despite their vast differences in background, share gifts of wit and capacities for blunt, combative speech.

For Marchand, 57, the appointment comes at the end of a mercurial public career that spans 11 years in federal politics and three major cabinet portfolios.

Espionage hinted

Canada expels Soviet attache

OTTAWA (CP) — A member of the Soviet embassy has been asked to leave Canada because of activities incompatible with his diplomatic status.

The external affairs department said Thursday Maj. Vladimir Vassiliev, assistant air attache, has been declared persona non grata.

He is expected to be on his way home to the Soviet Union by the weekend.

External affairs officials said by long custom they do not release reasons for asking diplomats to leave.

About a year ago military officers' messes were warned about East European military attaches dropping in for drinks and picking up intelligence.

The last Communist to be expelled from Canada was a Chinese diplomat about two years ago.

Reports from the United States said he was taking money across the border to pass to people who eventually sent it to assist Philippines revolutionaries.

Pipeline secrecy attacked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Details of the proposed oil tanker port at Kitimat should be open for public discussion, a spokesman for the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Thursday.

Gary Gallon criticized the federal transport ministry for withholding details and said the ministry seems "intent on making a decision without any public input.'

He said the ministry is entitled to withhold details, but thought it would discuss the matter in light of public concern that navigation in the area poses a serious threat of oil spills.

"It's a very bad political mistake on their part, but it's typical of the transport ministry not to involve the public, as we've seen with their proposals to extend Vancouver International Airport," Gallon said.

Kitimat Pipe Line Co. Ltd. applied Wednesday to the National Energy Board for permission to build a dock at Kitimat and a 753-mile pipeline to Edmonton.

The application was made public, but the transport ministry refused permission for the company to disclose its proposals for operation of the proposed port.

$6.6-million bungling not so awful—Andras

OTTAWA (CP) — The government bungled $6.6 million of the taxpayer's money away in the last year, Treasury Board President Robert Andras told the Commons Thursday, indicating he considered it a drop in the bucket.

Andras said his officials have calculated the maximum loss to the taxpayer from sloppy administration cited by the auditor-general at $6.6 million. He doubted whether it would ever be recovered.

Andras stressed that it was a small amount considering that the financial transactions — the cash flow — of all government departments, agencies, and corporations involved a total of $129 billion in 1975-1976. The actual spending was $33 billion.

"Let's keep it in perspective," Andras told Opposition MPs, criticizing them and the press for exaggerating the auditor-general's report which said the government has virtually lost control over spending.

The $6.6 million loss was only .00005 per cent or one-twenty thousandth of the total amount involved in government transactions, he said.

Andras was replying to a motion of non-confidence introduced by Conservative Leader Joe Clark who said the government has no control over spending and Parliament has no power to do anything about it. The motion was defeated.

"It is my contention that the government is in control of the public purse," Andras said, reminding the Commons that the government is still collecting taxes, paying interest on bonds and mailing out social security cheques every month.

Admitting there were several inadequacies in government administration that have caused losses, he added that Parliament does have the controlling power and will use its power to clean up the government's act.

Otherwise he couldn't understand "what in the devil we are doing here every day."

New prison study a waste – Barrett

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Dave Barrett, former premier of B.C. said Thursday studies on prison reform have been carried out since 1936 and the parliamentary committee now re-examining the question is wasting time.

Speaking to a political science class at Acadia University, Barrett said the material compiled over the years contains recommendations for the kind of preventive work needed for protection of victims of crime and the security of prison staff.

However, these recommendations have not been carried out, he said.

"All we are now getting is another parliamentary committee to cover the same route . . ."

COLONIST 500 FUND

It's amazing when you think about it.

And doubly gratifying when you realize that the $130.72 for the Colonist 500 Fund from these kindergarten pupils was money they had raised themselves and didn't just bring from home.

Stan Turner, principal of Frank Hobbs elementary school, wrote that "the enclosed cheque for $130.72 was raised by the combined efforts of Mrs. Hoyte, our kindergarten teacher, and the children and parents of her two classes:

"They collected old toys and books and made candy; then they held a sale to which the other children in the school were invited. The kindergarten pupils acted as store clerks and enjoyed not only the raising of the money for a good cause, but a very worthwhile learning experience."

As the young pupils well know, all their money will go to help less-fortunate families enjoy a better Christmas.

Last year, more than $44,000 was collected for the 500 Fund at the Colonist office, other businesses, and at Eaton's People Tree, standing once again in the Broad Street mall to accept donations.

Donations may be brought into the Colonist office at 2621 Douglas Street, or may be mailed to this address (postal code V8W 2N4).

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Talking to Frank Carson and Larry Ryan is an experience in democracy.

The two men, who will take their seats on Victoria city council in a few weeks, are worlds apart, but you get the feeling that if you scratch deep enough you will come up with a lot of similarities.

BOTH ARE card-carrying political party members. Ryan is a dedicated labor movement supporter and member of the NDP; Carson is a model free enterpriser and belongs to the Social Credit party.

Carson, 48, was born in Los Angeles while his parents were there on vacation. He left high school at 16 and worked on the Alaska Highway.

In 1947, he bought an earth-moving tractor and made his debut on the free enterprise scene by working his "cat" in the Alberta oil fields.

Carson:

"The reason I believe in private enterprise stems from the strong belief that a man should look after himself, his family and his community."

He moved to Vancouver in 1951 and worked at an assortment of jobs, piling lumber, digging ditches and driving a soft-drink truck.

HE TRIED university, but "didn't like it very much," and joined the Ford Motor Company as a clerk. He stayed with the company until 1961 when he moved to Victoria to open a car dealership.

Ryan, 57, was born in southern Ireland. He came to Canada in 1947 and worked on the General Motors assembly lines in Oshawa.

He came to Victoria in 1957 and started working for the Victoria Labor Council. In 1967, Ryan became the council's secretary.

The two men sat in the Colonist newsroom earlier this week to be interviewed about their goals as members of city council.

Will they engage in ideological warfare? Will they forget their philosophical differences and work as a team for the common good?

They probably revealed more than all the words could do about their character when they responded rather vehemently to a request to pose for photographs.

HOW ABOUT one shot shaking hands and another shaking fists at each other?

Both refused without hesitation. Dishonest, dramatic, no way, were some of the more kind remarks. Hams they are not. What's more, they both serve on the Victoria General Hospital Board, and they say they do get along.

Asked about ideological commitment, Carson said his belief in free enterprise stemmed from a creed that a man should first look after himself, his family and community before asking the community to look after him.

Ryan said he was motivated by his background and the humanistic traditions of the labor movement.

Both said they would approach their jobs on city council without compromising their principles.

In fact, Ryan said he would fight to make those principles a fact of life on council.

"You wouldn't do that, you're too dignified," said Carson, laughing.

The art of politics is to present your point of view convincingly without inflicting permanent wounds on your opponent, he said.

Carson agreed with that.

At one point of the discussion, Carson said that since there were no party politics involved all aldermen essentially worked together.

Ryan didn't quite see it that way. There was a danger in that attitude, he said, that one's convictions might be watered down or even drowned.

"On a municipal council, every alderman is a minority government," he said.

That prompted Carson to speak up:

"I KNOW YOU; you will fight for your beliefs. And I think our duty is to fight as long as there is a substance over which to fight," he said.

Carson added aldermen must have the courage to state their convictions regardless of the opinions of the majority.

Ryan interjected that this was probably the most difficult part since no alderman could lambaste an opponent under the protective mantle of party politics where opposition was expected.

Asked whether they have higher political ambitions, Ryan said: "I can answer that in two words — definitely not."

Carson said not at the moment, but he couldn't rule out that possibility. Carson ran as a Social Credit candidate in Oak Bay in the last provincial election and was defeated by Tory Scott Wallace.

Both men believe there will be decisions to face in which their political and philosophical convictions will play a part.

RYAN SAID inadequacies in the distribution of wealth and privilege could be found in every level of government and walk of life.

Carson said he believed that no decision by elected officials should infringe on the rights of others.

You come away from the interview convinced that intelligent debate is something both men will welcome. But you also know that neither is given to backstabbing or vicious fighting.

If both men stick to their principles and are guided by them, Victorians will be the real winners in last month's municipal election.

Ryan:

"Coming from my background representing the humanistic tradition in the labor movement, I believe politics in B.C. always involves two points of view."

Let's see reports on WCB—labor men

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Organized labor, which has been raising serious doubts about the operations of the Workers' Compensation Board, wasn't happy Thursday to find itself without copies of the two special reports made public by the provincial government.

As a result, labor leaders were treating news reports as unofficial and reserving comment until they have a chance to study the actual reports.

"I'm glad the reports are being released, but I'm disappointed we didn't get a copy," said Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America.

"It is certainly important that we know what the recommendations are and I hope the trade-labor movement has an opportunity to respond to them before any action is taken on them."

Labor Minister Allan Williams had copies distributed to the press and opposition politicians Thursday. The word was that the labor movement would receive copies today.

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Len Guy said the matter was so important he wouldn't consider commenting until he had read the reports and discussed them with the federation's compensation and safety committee.

It was the same committee that submitted an annual report at the recent federation convention condemning both the government and employers for the troubles of the WCB.

"Employers in B.C. took the election of the Social Credit government as a signal to dismantle and emasculate the Workers' Compensation Board, and to reduce the amount of benefits paid out to injured workers," the federation committee said in its report.

The committee also said it believed the two reports were called for by the government as a means of discrediting the former NDP government. It was wary of the role of P. S. Ross and Partners, the firm responsible for one of Thursday's reports, and refused to make any submissions to the Ross inquiry.

It may be that labor and the feared Ross company will find some common ground. The Ross report advises the province to strip the WCB chairman of some of his powers, something the IWA's Munro says has been suggested by labor.

Munro's union, largest in the province, has added its own stinging report on the WCB to that produced by the federation.

It was important that all WCB commissioners, and not just the chairman, have a say in what is happening, Munro said.

"We want to know if the three commisssioners will have a role to play in life and not just spend their time running around the country cutting ribbons."

Activity centre

City approves Blanshard deal

Humanistic motivations outweighed financial considerations Thursday when Victoria city council approved the purchase of a building on Kings Road to be used as an activity centre for children living in or near Blanshard Court.

Ald. Ronald McKenzie was the only one voting against the proposal. He wanted assurances that other levels of government would help finance the purchase and that the city wouldn't be saddled with the maintenance costs.

But Ald. Murray Glazier told council the purchase should be approved now and details sorted out later.

The building belongs to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded and is on Kings Road, just east of Blanshard.

The purchase price is $100,000. The federal government's Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has already agreed to pay $65,000. The remainder will be paid by the city and the provincial government, the city hopes.

The activity centre will serve as a place for children to play games and engage in crafts.

127-unit hotel under way soon

Construction will begin in January on a scaled-down hotel at Laurel Point that will cost $7 million and have 127 rooms.

Council earlier this year gave Canadian Freehold Properties, an affiliate of Canadian Industries Ltd., a land-use contract for a scaled-down version of its original plan for the project on the former Bapco Paint site.

The Harbour Inn will be built and owned by Canadian Freehold Properties and managed under long-term contract by Delta Hotels Ltd., as Delta's seventh hotel in Canada and fifth in B.C.

Delta Hotels president William Pattison said the hotel rooms will all have water views, and there will be an indoor-outdoor swimming pool and tennis courts. Underground parking for 150 cars has been provided beneath the adjacent Laurel Point condominium development. The hotel will also have meeting and banquet facilities for groups of up to 200 and a specialty restaurant.

The hotel is expected to open in the spring of 1978.

Plans for the site were announced by CIL as early as December, 1972. After lengthy debate this year council allowed a reduction in the hotel rooms from 199 to 127 and the height was scaled down from eight to four storeys.

Pattison said the changes were made solely for economic reasons.

Ultimatum issued on taxes

Anyone owing the city of Victoria more than $3,000 in property taxes had better pay up or face legal action after Dec. 31.

Victoria city council gave orders Thursday to city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to sue anyone whose property tax bill exceeds $3,000 on Dec. 31.

About $960,000 in property taxes are still outstanding and Mayor Michael Young has said that two-thirds of the amount is owed by 37 firms and individuals, mostly developers.

Plea for even tighter Canada-first job rule

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist Reporter

The chairman of the Victoria chapter of the Committee for an Independent Canada blasted the University of Victoria and Canadian universities in general Thursday, accusing them of perpetuating an "abysmal ignorance of Canada" through indiscriminate hiring policies.

Burke Cahill said UVic has not adopted a Canadian-first hiring policy as reported because the board of governors has the "ultimate say in the matter."

He said the board was meeting Dec. 20 to adopt or reject such a policy.

The Committee for an Independent Canada is sending the board a telegram urging the governors to tighten their definition of a Canadian.

Under new policy dealing with UVic's selection procedures, a Canadian is defined as a Canadian citizen, a landed immigrant in Canada at the time the application is made, or one who has had extensive training or experience in Canada.

Cahill said the telegram would propose that landed immigrants should have a good knowledge of Canada if they are going to be included in a Canadian-first policy.

"Providing jobs for Canadians is subsidiary. We want to provide Canadian content at the university level," Cahill said.

He said 92 per cent of professors in Britain were British, 84 per cent of professors in America were American, while 75 per cent of professors in Canada were "non-Canadian."

"An American can come to the border and be assured of a job at UVic. He just steps across the border and gets his passport stamped landed immigrant," he said.

Faculty representative on the board of governors, I. D. Pal, said Thursday he was puzzled by Cahill's reference that the faculty association was dominated by non-Canadians. Pal said 70 per cent of faculty association members were Canadians.

Referring to Pal's statement, Cahill retorted: "He's from Pakistan himself. He's from Pakistan and that's wonderful. It depends on what you call a Canadian.

"Canadians would be the last persons in the world to discriminate. It's not a question of discrimination. It's a question of providing knowledge of Canada to Canadians," Cahill said.

Proposal for all regional lakes

'Ban power boats'

Power boats may be banned from Elk-Beaver Lakes and all other regional park lakes by next summer if the Capital Region Board acts on a parks committee recommendation.

The other recommendation would ban all commercial ventures from regional parks with the exception of the present Kiwanis concession in Elk-Beaver Lake park.

Executive director Dennis Young told a local planning and zoning committee Thursday the parks committee had felt power boating was totally incompatible with all other recreational uses of fresh water lakes.

Regional park lakes, he said, were being used intensively for other water sports and that use is on the increase.

"There are vast areas of salt water for people who want to water ski or speed about in power boats," he said.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said: "The lakes are small and there just isn't room for power boats roaring around."

The open space committee report and recommendations will go back to the parks committee before formal recommendations go before the full board.

Fleming

Promoted —to Kelowna

He arrived in Oak Bay last March.

"This is quite a promotion," he said Thursday. "Oak Bay has a population of 20,000 while Kelowna has a population of 55,000."

He had some regrets at leaving Oak Bay, but was looking forward to a challenging new job.

"Kelowna expanded just a couple of years ago when it became an amalgamated city, from 20,000 to 55,000, and there are some problems to work on there."

Old pub still on block

The inn serves beer, liquor, wine and small dinners. The business is "definitely thriving," a spokesman said Thursday.

He said the inn was being sold primarily because three of the partners plan to start two other businesses. There were also "family reasons," he said.

The spokesman said the inn has had several purchase offers within the last month.

Simpson originally bought the site for less than 84 pounds sterling.

The inn has been on the market for three months.

Police said the vehicle, travelling west, was driven by Alexander Frederick Robert Schneider, 36, of 3325 Fulton Road in Colwood.

Police were still investigating.

City backs apartments on Gorge Road sites

Plans for two apartment projects on Gorge Road that will provide a total of 208 rental suites were approved Thursday by Victoria city council.

The two projects will be built at 225 and 241 Gorge Road, now occupied by the Prince Charles and Charles Dickens motels.

Part of the agreement between the city and the developer for both projects, E. J. Butler Ltd. and Citation Estates Ltd., provides for an easement for a future walkway along the waterfront.

After a public hearing at which only two persons spoke against the plans, city council approved a land-use contract between the city and the developer.

The two opponents were Joe Richards and Ann Tarasoff, both unsuccessful candidates for aldermanic seats on city council in last month's civic election.

Richards opposed only the development on the site now occupied by the Prince Charles motel. He said the motel was relatively new and could serve Victoria's tourist industry for many years to come.

Demolition of the motel, Richards said, would result in a loss of permanent jobs. Construction of the apartment building, he added, would provide only temporary jobs.

Mrs. Tarasoff objected to both projects on grounds that neither would be subject to rent controls.

The existing motels, she said, had been accommodating welfare recipients referred to them by the human resources department.

Victoria lawyer and former alderman Ian Stewart spoke on the developer's behalf.

Stewart told the public hearing that bulding density of the apartment projects was substantially lower than that allowed under the property's old motel zoning.

After the public hearing, city council approved both land-use contracts without debate.
